

Every year, more than three million children nationally are abused or neglected. Despite the state's attempts to help, many of these kids become trapped in the court and child welfare maze and can spend their childhood moving from one temporary placement to another.

Childhood is a time to make happy memories. Unfortunately, nationally there are more than 700,000 abused and neglected children who aren't experiencing a full happy childhood and are in protective custody. Two hundred of those children are in Knox County. The children are worrying about court hearings, adjusting to new placements, and transitioning to new schools. That's a heavy burden for a child to carry. With a CASA dedicated to their case, our most vulnerable children have someone speaking up for their best interests through the traumatic time.

CASA's don't have to be a lawyer or social worker to be the voice for a child. CASA's are people with the desire to help children. CASA's receive training from professionals in the legal and social service fields, and have the complete support of CASA staff throughout the life of the case. CASA is the only organization that empowers everyday citizens as appointed offices of the court. A CASA's involvement makes a direct impact on children's lives.

With your ongoing support, CASAs help children who have suffered abuse and neglect.
