Selectmen Review Cannabis Policies

Adult cannabis use is legal in Connecticut and the Greenwich Board of Selectmen is working to clarify the rules around cannabis use.

According to the law, if Greenwich chooses to regulate public use, then it is required to designate an area where cannabis can be consumed.

"If the law is there and we have to follow it, then we absolutely have to do it," Camillo said. He hopes to have more information in the coming weeks.

Possession of up to 1.5 ounces of cannabis has been legal since July 1, 2021. Connecticut towns can prohibit the recreational sale of marijuana within their town, which Planning & Zoning Commission has already done.

POLICE & FIRE

Online Predator Captured by Greenwich Police Department and FBI

The Greenwich Police Department, in partnership with the FBI, arrested a Darien resident for enticing a minor by computer. The man was in contact with a girl whom he believed was fourteen years old in an online chat room. This fourteen-year-old girl was actually a Greenwich Police Department Special Victims Section Detective investigating child predators who use online platforms to lure and victimize children. The man began to instigate explicit conversations which culminated in making plans to meet with the fourteen-year-old female in person at a specific location within Greenwich. He was arrested without incident upon arrival at the pre-arranged location in Greenwich and was charged with (53a-49/53-21) Criminal Attempt at Risk of Injury to a Minor and (53a-49/53a-90a(a)) Criminal Attempt at Enticing a Minor by Computer.

AROUND TOWN

Town Continues to Fight Against West Nile Virus

Greenwich is fighting against West Nile Virus (WNV) by conducting preemptive larviciding, including the treatment of public and private roadway catch basins, public school ground catch basins and other property owned and operated by the Town as needed. This year's program began in June and larvicide has been/will be reapplied every four to six weeks through early fall. WNV is spread to humans through the bite of an infected mosquito. WNV is not spread through person-to-person contact. Most people who are bitten by an infected mosquito fight off infection while experiencing mild or no symptoms at all.

Proposals Wanted for New Ice Rink Management

The Town is requesting proposals for the new Ice Skating Rink Operations and Management position. Whoever is selected would run the day-to-day operations, manage all programming and staffing, and handle building and equipment maintenance. Interested organizations must submit their proposals by October 26th at 11am. Visit the Town of Greenwich Website for more information.

Nora Stanton Barney places Greenwich on the Votes for Women Trail

By ANNE W. SEMMES

Last Sunday, September 25, Greenwich officially joined the National Votes for Women Trail in the state of Connecticut and nationwide with a roadside marker dedication ceremony identifying the historic homebase of suffragist Nora Stanton Barney at 700 Steamboat Road. Barney was the granddaughter of Elizabeth Cady Stanton whose leadership in the 1800's led to women winning the right to vote in 1920 with the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The timing of this dedication ceremony came a bit late to celebrate the Amendment's 2020-hundred-year anniversary due to the pandemic. But fifth generation Stanton Coline Jenkins was on hand and the maestro of the celebratory gathering at her historic family home. "I like to have this continuity of history," said Jenkins, "It's very hard to understand a social movement, but if you look at it in terms of generations, it's easier to grasp."

Elizabeth Cady Stanton was Jenkins' great great grandmother, Harriet Stanton Blatch her great grandmother, Nora Stanton Barney her grandmother, and Rhoda Barney Jenkins her mother. "So, those are five human beings," counting herself, said Jenkins. "But the point is that in order to change the Constitution we need mass movements."

With Governor Ned Lamont and Lt. Governor Susan Bysiewicz recognizing the "significant contribution" Nora Stanton Barney made to American history, Coline Jenkins invited some 49 guests to the dedication ceremony at 700 Steamboat Road, a Georgian brick house her grandmother Nora, a civil engineer and architect, had designed and built in the 1930's.

Invited from Utah was Victoria Karpos, co-owner and founder of MarbleCast Products Inc. which makes the miniature presidential statues at the Smithsonian. Karpos had realized, told Jenkins, her company was just honoring men, and that, "We need to honor women who built the nation." Jenkins herself instigated bringing the first statue of "real women" to Central Park with a 14-foot bronze sculpture of three famed suffragists, her ancestor Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Susan B. Anthony, and Sojourner Truth.

Also invited was author Penny Colman with 40 giveaway copies of her book, "Elizabeth Cady Stanton & Susan B. Anthony: A Friendship That Changed the World." Musician Sarah Foxe would sing suffragist songs. And two attorneys, Wendy Murphy and Jean Sweeney would address the ERA. Jenkins also enlisted her son Eric Jenkins-Sahlin to speak and her daughter Elizabeth Jenkins-Sahlin to meet and greet as sixth generational Stanton family members.

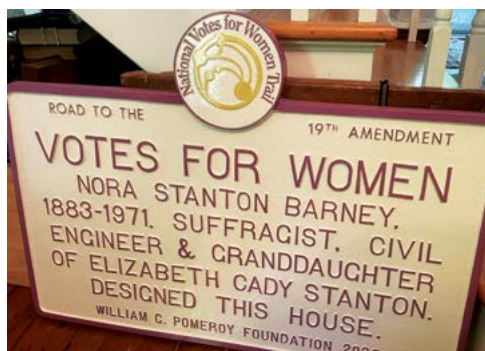

Those looking for a photo opportunity were offered a unique vignette to stand by a family heirloom, a chair that belonged to Elizabeth Cady Stanton lent to and borrowed back from the National Park for Women's Rights in Seneca Falls, N.Y., while on the other side stood a life-size blown-up photo of Nora from the New York Historical Society.

To learn the full story of Nora Stanton Barney guests strolled along an alley of enlarged photographs running alongside the Steamboat Road house. Nora's story begins in England, where her mother Harriet Stanton had married a Mr. Blatch, her English father. "So, she had a lot of European tastes like this Georgian house," told Jenkins, "But she would also do Tudor and Norman." Jenkins lists 14 houses her real estate developer grandmother invested in, including The Stanton House, an inn on Maple Avenue, and stately houses in Millbrook, on Glenville Road, and on Hawkwood Lane, a lane Nora named after the area she lived in in England.

But it was at Cornell University where Nora became the first woman to earn a degree in civil engineering in 1905. "And she's in New York City," told Jenkins, "Dealing with infrastructure there with bridges and tunnels and water supply systems." In 2017, a new tunnel boring machine (TBM) built to repair New York City's Delaware Aqueduct was christened NORA to honor Barney who had helped design the New York City water supply system.

At Cornell Nora Stanton Barney had founded a suffrage club, then "campaigning with zeal" for women's rights and equality as a suffrage leader in the Women's Political Union, serving as its president in 1915. She would join the efforts for a federal Equal Rights Amendment, and in her later years remain politically active.

And today, her granddaughter, Coline Jenkins serves as president of the Elizabeth Cady Stanton Trust. Earlier this year, when word leaked out from the Supreme Court of the possible overturning of Roe v Wade, Jenkins' Trust filed lawsuits in three states to both activate the ERA and protect the right to abortion. She explained that the lawsuits were filed because "only with full Equal Protection of all laws can women's right to choose be protected."

Addressing the status of the Equal Rights Amendment, she said it has been ratified by 38 states, but noted it awaits an administrative act to publish it according to Article 5 of the U.S. Constitution. "It's just one sentence: 'The equal rights of citizens shall not be denied or abridged in the United States or by any state on account of sex.' And don't we believe in that? And we're on the cusp of the 250th anniversary of America!"

Jenkins has also served on Greenwich's RTM for over three decades. "The RTM when I started in the 1980's," she said, "was about 25 percent women and now it's about 50 percent." And, "super-important" she added, "is for the first time ever in the history of Greenwich our moderator is female. And Moderator Alexis Voulgaris is incredibly competent."

Jenkins' roadside marker with its "VOTES FOR WOMEN" title is now attached to the stone wall of 700 Steamboat Road. She was grateful for the generosity of the William G. Pomeroy Foundation whose historic markers help tell "the untold story of suffrage for all women, of all ethnicities, that extends well past the passage of the 19th amendment." It's providing 250 historic roadside markers nationally on The National Votes for Women Trail. "All of these people across the nation," noted Jenkins, "created a critical mass in order to amend the U.S. Constitution. That means a lot to me. Some people like perfume, but I like amending the U.S. Constitution. What an honor."

Smarter Watering Begins With You

Smarter watering is watering without wasting such an important, irreplaceable resource while also keeping your lawn and garden looking their best.

Most importantly, it can be as easy as following Aquarion's mandatory irrigation schedule. Or go a step further...upgrade to a high-efficiency, irrigation system. Either way, you'll reduce what the EPA has identified as one of America's biggest water wasters - lawn and garden overwatering.

Meanwhile, you'll make more water available for vital needs throughout your community - like for fire protection and drinking. And that's just plain smart.

Cooking is an Act of Love

By ICY FRANTZ

A few weeks ago, I had the incredible honor of speaking with a living legend

And what would usually make me nervous and tongue tied was actually enlightening and fun.

I guess it boils down to this-world renowned Chef Jacques Pépin is as kind as he is famous.

And when I went over my notes from my hour-long conversation with Pépin and his son-in-law Rollie Wesen, Co-founder and President of the Jacques Pépin Foundation, these are the words, spoken in the most intoxicating French accent, that have remained with me

I thought about how they applied to my own life: about the early days of the pandemic - shaky times - when our family cooked together and then gathered around our kitchen table to enjoy a dinner.

Or the cakes that our daughter, the baker, has made for me and others to celebrate birthdays and milestones.

Or my good friend, who has achieved the art of creating the perfect chocolate chip cookie, and then delivers them at times of crisis to comfort...to love.

And this statement rang true.

But as Jacques and Rollie told me about their experiences, it became apparent that cooking is the main ingredient in not only their professional success, but - and perhaps more importantly - in how they have chosen to use their well-honed skills to lovingly impact the world in which we live.

The name Jacques Pépin is synonymous with culinary arts mastery. He started cooking at the young age of six in his mother's restaurant in his childhood town of Bourgen-Brasse, France and over the course of his career, has worked in countless prestigious restaurants - first in Paris, then in America. He authored over 30 cookbooks and was a longtime friend of the iconic Julia Child, and their 1999 PBS series Julia and Jacques Cooking at Home won a Daytime Emmy Award.

His work has earned him 24 James Beard Foundation Awards, five honorary doctoral degrees, the Lifetime Achievement Award at the 46th Annual Daytime Emmy Awards, and, in 2004, the Légion d'Honneur, France's highest order of merit.

So, when Rollie came to Jacques in 2016 with an idea, a way to make a real difference, the timing was perfect. Rollie was volunteering at a community kitchen in Rhode Island, where young adults were learning the important skills needed to work in professional kitchens and he was witnessing first-hand the transformative power of the culinary arts. Both Rollie and Jacques were experienced teachers, and it seemed like a natural next step to share their extraordinary talents with people who could benefit.

But as Jacques and Rollie told me about their experiences, it became apparent that cooking is the main ingredient in not only their professional success, but - and perhaps more importantly - in how they have chosen to use their well-honed skills to lovingly impact the world in which we live.

The Jacques Pépin Foundation was created to support the culinary training that was happening in community kitchens across our nation specifically for adults with barriers to employment such as incarceration, homelessness, substance abuse issues, low skill and education attainment, and lack of work history.

“It's win-win-win,” offered Rollie about community kitchens and the work of the foundation.

“Individuals gain skills, which gives them access to jobs and healthcare, the ability to feed their families and a purpose in life. Society gains workers who were previously excluded in the workforce and now have skills to reenter the workforce. Food service - desperate for workers (there are an estimated one million vacancies in food service post-pandemic), now have skilled workers.”

One recent graduate from a culinary training program in Hartford, Connecticut supported by the foundation offered these words.

“The experience that I gained here besides cooking is confidence and just knowing that people don't give up on you, especially if you don't give up on yourself. I was jobless for a whole year and if it wasn't for them (the program) I wouldn't be where I am right now.” Currently fully employed he said the opportunity to learn from Pépin was “phenominal.”

In addition to Pépin's in person teaching, the foundation supplies the community programs with curricular materials, equipment, and video instruction, and has granted gifts these last four years, with a total gift amount to date of one million dollars.

Like the rest of us, the foundation pivoted during the pandemic. No longer able to host big gala fundraising events, they utilized and leveraged their existing library of over 200 videos. They asked chefs, many of whom were hurting in the aftermath of the pandemic, to participate and they did so willingly and generously.

“Chefs work 10 to 12 hours a day, six days a week and then they use their one day off to give back to the many organizations that ask them for help.” commented Pépin.

And so, the foundation's video library grew to include not only Jacques Pépin, but over 20 hours of celebrity chefs from José Andrés to Andrew Zimmerman and are available to all of the partnering community kitchens. And - lucky for us - they are now available to the public for a small donation to the foundation.

Through all of these efforts, the foundation has enriched lives and strengthened communities through the power of culinary education for all people.

On October 7th, Jacques Pépin will be honored for his lifetime of achievement at the Greenwich Wine and Food 10th Anniversary Celebrity Chef Gala (the grand finale of what promises to be a delicious week of celebration, highlighting local and national chefs, and showcasing innovation in the wine and food industries).

The proceeds of the week-long event will benefit two organizations - the Jacques Pépin Foundation and Wholesome Wave, founded by Chef Michel Nischan, the late Gus Schumacher and the late Michael Batterberry to address diet-related disease by helping low-income Americans buy and eat healthy fruits and vegetables.

Is cooking the greatest act of love?

When we consider the culinary masterpieces created by the hands of Jacques Pépin, or the lives that have been transformed by the work of his foundation and its gift of culinary education, it's hard to dispute.

Or the magic of a community that comes together around a stove or at a table or over a bottle of wine.

Or in its purest form- no matter the level of culinary expertise-perhaps it's the honor of simply providing nourishment and sustenance to all that is the greatest act of love.

Black Mold Issue

By CARLINE MARTIN

Welcome to The Real Scoop. This monthly column is intended to help homeowners and potential homeowners in our community address a variety of home related and real estate issues. As a Realtor, I am often approached by many homeowners and buyers to provide answers for a variety of questions pertaining to Greenwich and all things home related. In my quest to provide answers, I have relied on my own expertise, as well as that of many trade professionals I have come to know in our community. The information I have provided has been deemed very useful and greatly appreciated, so I have decided to share what I know with the Greenwich community.

Q: We moved into our home last February. We have recently discovered black mold in our basement. This was not something we discovered during the purchase process so it appears to be recent. Is this something we should be concerned about and how can we get rid of it?

A: Thank you for reaching out with this important question. The presence of black mold in a home can be alarming to many homeowners and can, often, affect the sale of a home. While not everyone may be impacted by mold spores, black mold can be a health hazard, especially to those with high sensitivity and allergies. Symptoms can include headache, coughing/wheezing, itchy or burning eyes and/or throat, rashes and fatigue, although symptoms can be difficult to attribute to black mold as they are very similar to typical allergy symptoms. You should consult your doctor if any of these symptoms appear, especially if they are persistent, when these symptoms accompany the discovery of black mold in your home. It is important to remove the mold immediately. Here are a few things you should know about black mold and how to remove it.

Most black mold can be easily removed by applying a cleaning agent such as bleach. Start by cleaning the area with warm water and soap. Mix 3/4C bleach with a gallon of water. You can wipe the area with the bleach solution or put it in a spray bottle and spray the entire area with the solution. Wait 5 minutes and then wipe clean with warm water.  It is important NOT to ever mix bleach with another cleaning product, such as ammonia or products containing ammonia, as the chemical reaction will produce a gas that can be deadly. Bleach mixed with water is all you need to kill and remove the mold. If you feel uncomfortable mixing your own solution, there are pre-mixed solutions you can use or, in extreme cases or if you do not wish to handle the mold yourself, you can hire a mold remediation company.

If you decide to attempt the removal yourself, it is important to prepare and take proper precautions before you start. Wearing an N-95 mask, rubber gloves and protective eye goggles is essential. Additionally, be mindful to turn off air conditioning, fans or any device that may blow mold spores to other locations. In the beginning stages, you should be able to eliminate the presence of mold by following these steps. Once removed, it is important to eliminate the source of the mold.

Mold grows in wet or damp locations. Therefore, it is important to keep areas such as basements and bathrooms well ventilated. A good extractor fan in bathrooms

While not everyone may be impacted by mold spores, black mold can be a health hazard, especially to those with high sensitivity and allergies. Symptoms can include headache, coughing/wheezing, itchy or burning eyes and/or throat, rashes and fatigue, although symptoms can be difficult to attribute to black mold as they are very similar to typical allergy symptoms.

and installing dehumidifiers in basements should be enough to keep these areas dry and mold free. Additionally, it is important to repair leaks quickly and thoroughly. Mold grows quickly in the presence of moisture.

In cases where mold has become present as a result of a flood, it may be best to consider hiring a remediation company. These companies are skilled at identifying and thoroughly removing mold from affected areas. It is important to exercise proper due diligence when choosing a remediation company. Make certain that the company is trained specifically in removing mold. Before setting up appointments for estimates, ask each company if their work is guaranteed and what the terms of the guarantee are. It is also wise to ask if they have pollution liability insurance. Inquire about the type of mold testing that the company performs and whether they isolate the area they will be working on to prevent mold from spreading throughout your home. A good, qualified remediation company will be prepared to offer a thorough remediation plan. If you have discovered mold in the dream home are about to purchase, this does not mean you need to walk away. It is important to identify the source of the mold and make your purchase contingent of the proper removal of the mold and repair of the source. If you are building a new home, there are now mold resistant materials that can be used in the construction process such as mold-resistant drywall that you may wish to discuss using with your builder.

As we enter the fall season, part of your fall clean-up should be to remove leaves from gutters and to check your roof for any leaks or signs of mold. Clogged gutters can not only be a source of mold growth but can cause roof and window leaks due to the back-up of water. Proper steps taken now can save you aggravation come springtime.

Michael Spezzano, Jr. - A Greenwich Legend

BY JESSICA FITZPATRICK

"Mike Spezzano is a legend" according to First Bank of Greenwich President and CEO, Frank Gaudio. It is the first thing he said to me about Michael Spezzano. (And Frank knows legends! Go anywhere in the tristate area with him and it's guaranteed someone's going to stop and ask "Hey, aren't you the guy from the billboards?")

Born July 19, 1931, Michael Spezzano came from a family of modest means. His father was the first postmaster in Riverside and his mother was a dressmaker at various shops in town. As a boy, he remembers her taking trips down to NYC to view the newest creations on sale at Bloomingdales and Sak's. She'd later take those memories and recreate them into affordable versions of their former haute-couture selves selling them to the ladies of Greenwich. It seems this taste for beauty ran deep within his maternal side; his uncle, Emilio Strazza, was a sculptor whose works can still be viewed today. Here in Greenwich, he helped with the design and erection of the soldier sculpture in front of the Greenwich Board of Education building. He's also to be credited with assisting in one of NYC's greatest landmarks: the 2 lion statues that guard the hallowed steps into the Public Library. I asked if it was this uncle whom Spezzano Drive here in Greenwich was named after, but was told it was his Uncle Louis Spezzano who purchased the land in the early 1900's.

Interesting to note, it was Michael's staid father who led him to his profession. Determined to have his son receive an education but unable to afford college, his father encouraged him to sign up for a beauty program at Wright Tech, a state technical school in Stamford. Discovering an unexpected joy for the work, he was the school's first male graduate and his career was launched. After working at a few beauty shops here in Greenwich, Michael heard of an opening at a training school launched by Sak's Fifth Avenue and jumped at the opportunity. He was so skilled, they offered him a position upon graduating and he began building his client list in NYC.

At about 20, Michael grew weary of the commute to and from NYC and opened his first salon in an apartment building just above Greenwich Avenue. Michael's "Chateau Lafayette" quickly became known as the "it salon" for the next 15 years, with Michael making home and office visits to the more illustrious members of Greenwich society. However, as the salon's popularity grew and the size of the space did not, Michael began envisioning something bigger and better and set about seeking it.

After visiting the then-famous Breck Salon, he was so impressed by the Georgian style living room that served as their reception area that he sought out the owner and asked for his assistance in recreating it at his next salon. Discovering the perfect location for it on Benedict Place, he set about creating his second salon in an old house not zoned for commercial business. At this point Michael's notoriety was well-known throughout the area. Upon opening in 1966, "Michael's Beauty Salon" was just as successful as its predecessor. However, after numerous requests from US Tobacco to purchase the location, and a final "name your price" appeal, Michael handed over the keys in the early 70's and began searching for his third location.

Finding it in another old house at 112 Mason Street, the final "Michael's Beauty Salon" was as much of a success as the former, before finally closing its doors in 2002. It's a true testament to Michael being woven into the fabric of Greenwich that members of staff here at the Bank can still remember getting their hair done, or watching a friend get worked on by him in their youth.

At 21, Michael met Loretta Testa, the woman who would be his wife, while she was babysitting his neighbor's children. Shortly after, in 1952, the two were married. Michael joined the US Air Force with Loretta following him to the Sheppard Field airbase in Wichita Falls, TX, for their honeymoon and his training. After about a year, they returned East and set up home back in Greenwich with Michael working at the airbase in Port Chester. Michael and Loretta were married for 68 years, and had 4 children before Loretta passed away on June 16, 2021, at the age of 90, with her family by her side.

An artist at heart, Michael was always drawing in his spare time, but after joining the Greenwich Senior Center he really began to let it flow. Painting for the sheer joy of creation, Michael loves to imitate different artists and experiment with different styles. Living alone nowadays, he's never far from an easel and will paint whatever he's inspired by whenever the inspiration strikes.

He says "Painting is an expression of my feelings. For me as an artist, the pleasure is twofold. First, is the enjoyment when creating. Painting, outdoors in particular, alone with something you are creating, is something quite unique - the scene, the sounds, and the changes that occur in the clouds. Second, is the gratification when you see the end result.

"Painting," Mike muses, "makes you see something different in every scene that you can take apart and paint. One gains an appreciation for the beauty in a forest, a seascape, etc. There is always something that captures your eye and inspires you to create a new image. Whether I'm painting trees, or landscapes, the mood will determine the outcome."

As you walk through his basement gallery hung with twinkling Christmas lights, and dotted here and there with burned out candles, the scope of his work is evident everywhere you look. Hundreds of paintings sprawl about the room, on the floor, on easels, hung on the walls and handmade wooden frames or pallets in the center of the room, revealing a diverse symphony of imagery and color. Landscapes, seascapes and cityscapes are beside portraits, nature scenes and still lifes. A perfect replication of Vermeer's "Girl With A Pearl Earring" sits next to something you think is a Monet, but is actually a Spezzano original. And with a painting taking him merely a few hours to complete who knows how many more are still to come. Many, we hope. At 91 years old, Mike is as indefatigable as he is legendary, and we're glad for it. We just had our 3rd art show with him and are looking forward to another. If you missed the show earlier this week, you can visit us at our Cos Cob branch at 444 E Putnam Avenue to see the work he's done over the last few years.

process is being handled by the Human Resources Department and Dr. Jonathan Budd and is currently on going. The Land Remains “Laws change; people die; the land remains.” These words were said by President Abraham Lincoln. They are as impactful today as they were when first spoken. Perhaps it is their starkness, just seven words, but they remind us that before us and after us Greenwich has always been here and will continue to be here.

We may not think of “the land” every day in such a way, but there is an organization in town that does; The Greenwich Land Trust (GLT). They work every day to preserve open space in our community. The GLT is a private, non-profit organization that owns land and conservation easements throughout our community.

Their properties are diverse and wide-ranging. They are located in every part of Greenwich, from the tidal marshes of Long Island Sound to the lush woodlands of the backcountry. As of last count, they were stewards of 848 acres and growing. Very impressive. Especially when you consider that the GLT acquires these properties through donations or purchases by community partnerships and neighborhood groups.

The keen observer can spot these properties throughout town, marked by their white signs with the GLT logo. Perhaps their most significant property is the 94-acre Treetops Preserve located on the Greenwich/Stamford border.

Treetops is the former home of Broadway star Libby Holman— as well-known for her scandalous lifestyle in the 1930s and 1940s as she was for her

*“Live in each season as it passes;
breathe the air, drink the drink, taste the fruit, and resign yourself to the influence of the earth.”*

Henry David Thoreau, Walden

sultry voice. After her death in 1971 and a series of events, the home and property were considered for multi-home development which would have forever changed that part of our community.

Through a complex financial deal, the Stamford Land Conservation Trust and the GLT had the opportunity to acquire the property, keeping it from development, but only if they could raise $5million in 100 days. Led locally by David Ogilvy and with great effort, their fundraising was successful. Treetops survives with its rich legacy intact for future generations because of David’s effort.

One of the events created to raise awareness of the GLT and Treetops effort continues to this day – it is not one to miss. Now in its 23rd year, Go Wild! is being held on Sunday, October 16th at the Polo grounds (a GLT land easement) on North Street. This is an event the whole family will enjoy.

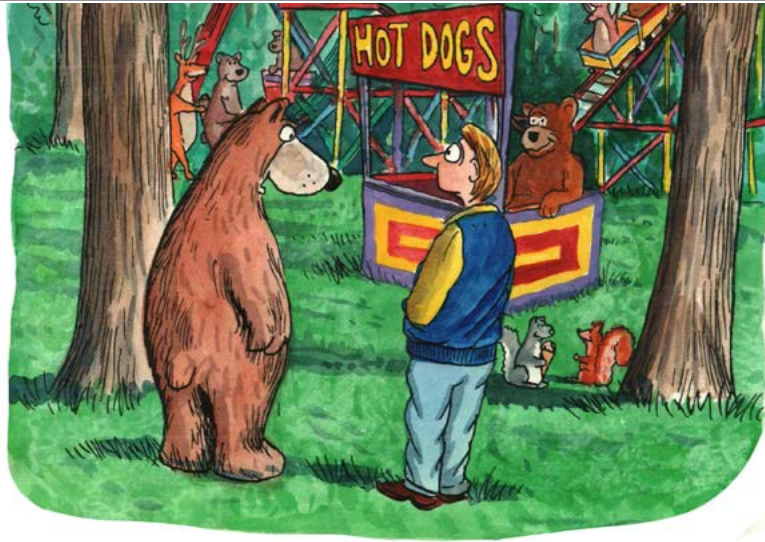

Go Wild! is the only event in town (that we know of) where you can get a hot air balloon ride to see Greenwich from the air. There is also live music, a rock-climbing wall, a petting zoo (very cute!), food and drinks, and many other activities. It is the perfect way to spend a fall afternoon. The night before, Saturday October 15th, there is also a drive-in movie which is great for a carload of kids.

If you are going and can contribute in this way, we encourage you to consider purchasing the Patron tickets (information can be found on the GLT website). The Patron tickets are more expensive, yes, but they allow early admission, priority parking and access to the Patron tent of food and beverages. It is for a very worthwhile cause.

The Greenwich Land Trust does more than preserve the land around us and protect green spaces. They educate our community on what the land has to offer. They work to create a balance between what open space should be and how we can use it for passive recreation. Their greenhouse teems with plantings, encouraging the return of native plants to our environment. They are literally the stewards of our lands.

We hope to see you at Go Wild!

PAPER POLICY

In the Interest of Transparency

We sent this email to all local legislative candidates (Democrat and Republican) regarding their submissions. Please note our Letter to the Editor policy if you would like to write in support of a candidate. We have published all letters and OpEds received so far that fit our policy.

“Greetings candidates for state senate and assembly districts serving Greenwich. This email is being delivered to all local legislative candidates.

This email is to invite you to:
1. Submit news releases to the Greenwich Sentinel on a regular basis especially between now and Election Day. It is our intention to carve out some space in the Sentinel’s weekly print edition on a regular basis for this purpose.

What is news? Campaign special announcements or developments. Endorsements. Articles published in major publications. Campaign accomplishments. Events attended or coming up. Photos of you on the campaign trail are also welcome with a caption.

2. Submit letters to the editor. Letters to the editor should be emailed to editor@greenwichsentinel.com or posted here: <https://www.greenwichsentinel.com/send-letter-to-the-editor/> Letters should also be positive and explain why someone is supporting you, not why they dislike your opponent. [The Sentinel will not publish letters which are (a) unverifiable (b) attack the other candidate or party specifically.]

3. Submit Op Eds. Op Eds are welcome on legislative topics or issues that inform about the specific legislative topic. They should not be campaign position papers. We will also publish one Op Ed from each candidate if submitted on why you are running. It should be 600-700 words. [It should not include an attack your opponent or the other party.]

Of course our quest is to be fair with allocation of news and editorial space and to elevate the level of discourse but that job starts with your submissions.”

Fiorello Commended for Leadership on Connecticut Food Donation Act

Dear Editor,
We are writing to commend Rep. Kim Fiorello’s leadership in obtaining passage of the Connecticut Food Donation Act.

In the United States, an estimated 16 billion pounds of edible food is thrown away annually by supermarkets, while an estimated fifty million Americans, including 16 million children, go hungry every day. At the same time, fossil fuels are being burnt to transport the food to solid waste landfills, where the waste decomposes and creates environmental harmful gases.

Yet, every day supermarkets cull their shelves of perfectly edible foods in the normal course of their business because the food is excess or doesn’t meet their cosmetic standards. New York has a law making this edible food available to religious and non-profit organizations which feed the needy for free.

As a first step, the Act provides a safe harbor from lawsuits for those donating edible food for feeding the needy. Importantly, the Act also establishes a bi-partisan task force to develop a supermarket food donation program for Connecticut.

The Act was co-introduced by Rep. Fiorello, together with Rep. Dorinda Borer (Dem. West Haven). Rep. Fiorello was able to obtain the testimony from numerous Greenwich residents, as well as those in Greenwich in the food relief field, before the Legislature’s General Law Committee. Some Republicans initially had concerns about the bill being a mandate, but Rep. Fiorello and Rep. Borer worked together to craft a version that was acceptable to legislators of both parties.

Even though sponsored by a freshman legislator, the Act was passed unanimously by the House of Representatives and the Senate, and signed by the Governor. Rep. Fiorello was also able get her nominee appointed to the bi-partisan task force established by the Act.

Greenwich and its residents and food relief organizations were at the forefront of Connecticut addressing and providing solutions to this humanitarian and environmental problem. Not many people know about this success story and the key role Rep. Fiorello played. We want to make sure the community knows what excellent work Rep. Fiorello did.

Fazio Strong Advocate for Women’s Issues

To the Editor,
As a Democrat and a woman, I have confidence in Sen. Ryan Fazio and his leadership on women’s issues.

Ryan believes in keeping abortion legal in the state of Connecticut. In addition, he is an advocate of improving contraceptive access and assuring higher safety and health standards for surgical abortions. He introduced a bill himself in January to improve women’s access to birth control. When it comes to abortions, I think we can all agree that the best goal is to reduce the number of unwanted pregnancies and Ryan feels strongly that education and access to affordable contraception can help in achieving this goal, while also keeping the procedure legal in the state.

Ryan has taken a leadership role in many issues that impact women, children, and all citizens of our district and state, really. He co-wrote and passed SB2 to improve student mental health by introducing and evaluating new programs and policies toward cell phones and mental health education in schools. He also co-sponsored HB5001 which will improve access to mental health care in our state.

He has never shied away from offering his voice or seeking solutions for all of our state’s problems. He is a vocal advocate for school choice, curriculum transparency and a civic curriculum requirement.

He has supported our police to keep our streets safe and take illegal guns off the streets and has taken steps to reform the 8-30g law and offer better solutions on affordable housing. He believes in and supports our business community, especially small businesses, many of them run by women.

Ryan Fazio stands behind the women in this community. He is committed to making our state better for all citizens. He has my support and I hope you will join me.

Connecticut's Economy Has Momentum – Let's Keep It Moving Forward

By RACHEL KHANNA

Grumbling about Connecticut's economy is as ingrained in certain circles as complaining about the weather. But in the last few years, something remarkable has happened. Our state is having an economic revival which rating agencies and employers are noticing.

Our jobless rate has fallen sharply, and six months of economic growth has exceeded the national average. Interest in venture capital investments is increasing, and new business registrations are at a level not seen since 2006. A recent agreement with Lockheed-

Martin and Connecticut will support the creation of an estimated 30,000 direct and indirect high-tech jobs over the next 20 years.

This fiscal year's budget included an unprecedented $4.3 billion surplus. For the third year in a row, the State paid a cumulative $5.4 billion toward our future pension liabilities, debt payments which are estimated to save taxpayers $440 million annually starting in 2023. Our rainy-day fund now stands at an extraordinary $3.3 billion. Should an economic downturn or emergency arise, we can rely on these funds instead of borrowing or raising taxes. All four credit agencies have upgraded us to A+/AA ratings, which will result in millions of dollars in interest savings on future debt.

Improvement in our fiscal position is the result of the hard work and financial prudence of our state legislators and Governor Lamont. And they took additional steps this spring to help mitigate the impact of inflation, a global and national issue, on Connecticut families. Our Governor and Democratic legislators—with the support of one Republican—passed a budget that provides over $600 million in tax cuts, the largest in Connecticut history. This cut comes after no tax increases for the last three years. As your representative, I commit to no tax increase, balanced budgets and will work across the aisle to make this a bi-partisan effort.

Connecticut's strong financial position opens the door to considering reducing or eliminating certain taxes such as the estate tax and the gift tax. These taxes provide little revenue and are often cited as reasons for leaving the state.

While good management has put us on the right fiscal trajectory, economic challenges remain. One of our biggest obstacles is our worker shortage. Economists have suggested that even if unemployment fell to zero, the state would still have over 34,000 unfilled jobs.

We must find ways to attract and keep skilled workers. I have signed onto the Connecticut Business and Industry Association's Transform Connecticut Policy Pledge which identifies ways to address our state's worker shortage through smart policies that enlist employers, state leaders and our colleges and trade schools in ensuring we have and retain the highly skilled and educated workforce Connecticut employers need.

As your representative, my first priority will always be the concerns and needs of my constituents. Our district pays a substantial percentage of the total State income taxes, and gets little in return. The state budget and the CT State Bond Commission are the sources of numerous municipal funding opportunities, and securing them requires leadership and cooperation. For example, it was only through the intervention and advocacy of Representative Steve Meskers from neighboring district 150, that led to the award of $500,000 for the Round Hill Firehouse in our district.

While I applaud the Connecticut towns that received state grants for their community, I am saddened that we in Greenwich do not have the unified support of our delegation in fighting for our fair share of state funds. If elected, you can be sure that I will have a seat at the table and I will use my voice to advocate for badly needed funding for our district.

I am a twenty year resident of Connecticut who has raised four daughters in both our public and private schools. I have devoted many hours to serving our community through two terms on the Representative Town Meeting, the PTA board of Parkway School, the Audubon Society and Kids in Crisis. I am an entrepreneur, a tri-athlete and a cookbook author. Between now and election day I will endeavor to meet as many of the residents of the 149th district as possible. I want to be the one fighting for you in Hartford.

We must find ways to attract and keep skilled workers.

Upcoming Early Voting Ballot Initiative is Extremely Vague

To the Editor

The election is about a month away from now and there is a lot of focus on the candidates. There also is an important referendum on the ballot to amend our Connecticut Constitution to allow early voting. I searched the Internet to find out more information and it is difficult to find. Why? Because there is none.

The amendment would simply change the Constitution to allow the legislature to pass laws with whatever specifics they want. Those specifics are currently unknown. So, the voter is not being informed of the exact details of the legislature's intentions. This is way too vague and the referendum should be rejected.

When you fill out your ballot, turn it over to see the referendum and please vote no.

Make Your Vote Count

Dear Friends and Neighbors in Greenwich and Stamford,

I invite you, your family and friends to join me in re-electing State Representative Kimberly Fiorello for Greenwich and Stamford.

If you are like me when you are casting your vote on elections, we want someone who listens, who cares, who has integrity, who you can trust and who will fight for you and your family. That someone is Kimberly Fiorello.

Kimberly, a mother of four children, is a woman of strength and convictions, with a pure love for her community, state, and country. She knows that the unique beauty of America is that each person can better themselves through hard work and equal opportunity, to build a better life than the generation before.

For many years we have yearned to have a Representative that would take our issues to the Capitol and Kimberly is doing that for all of us. The American dream that we have thirsted is being clipped away in front of our eyes. Kimberly Fiorello is our watchdog that knows the needs of our community. And her armor is us because she is doing it for us. Kimberly is fighting for a stronger economy and better educational choices for our children for our future. She is fearless in going up against the Hartford bosses.

Make your vote count. When casting your vote for District #149 vote for Kimberly Fiorello, because it is for a better Connecticut!

LETTER

Why we should all care about liberal bias in our schools

This letter is in response to the Editorial entitled "Our Children Come First" published in the Greenwich Sentinel last week. While there is much in this well-written and balanced editorial with which I agree, and with which probably most reasonable people agree, I felt it would be helpful to point out where I believe the author is missing the point of the community members' concern regarding liberal bias in schools encapsulated on video by Project Veritas.

The editorial states that parents love their children and must be allowed to advocate for them. I wholeheartedly agree. The editorial also states that there are important school issues like bullying and sub-par test scores that must be addressed and redressed. I also agree. I also concur that transparency is a highly effective antidote to improper practices on the part of the school and mistrust on the part of the parents and community. Where I part ways is with the author's belief that the issue of liberal indoctrination and discriminatory hiring practices to further the liberal agenda is being "politicized" thereby focusing attention away from the important issues of bullying and sub-par test scores to the detriment of the students.

So first, with regard to the editorial's concern of "people trying to politicize" the issue of a liberal political agenda in our schools, I would point out that the issue itself happens to involve the improper use of politics in schools and therefore there is no way to discuss the issue without political terms. In other words, the issue itself is politics. It also seems logical that people of the opposing political persuasion, i.e., in this case, conservatives, would be the ones to sound the alarm on the issue of liberal indoctrination and that they would look to their political party leaders for help in their efforts to combat the practices in question. Furthermore, it is important to note that community members who are opposed to what they see as diffuse liberal bias in schools are actually trying to remove politics from the schools, thereby doing the opposite of politicizing in a sense. They are not saying that they believe teachers should inject conservative principles into the classrooms with the aim of creating future voting Republicans. Their position is clearly that indoctrination, brainwashing and political agendas of any persuasion should not be at all present in the classroom and safeguards must be in place to prevent such activities in the future. In sum, therefore, I do not see "politicization" as a problem here.

Next, in focusing attention to other important issues in schools (i.e., bullying and sub-par test scores), the editorial is implying that liberal political indoctrination of students in schools is not an important issue. With this view, I could not disagree more. Many would even argue that the bullying and sub-par test scores the author highlights are, at least in part, products of prioritizing ideology over academics in the classroom. In any case, it comes down to simple fairness. The people in the camp who are defending the liberal bias status quo of the schools should ask themselves this simple question: How would they feel and what would their response be if they believed students were being indoctrinated with conservative political principles? In such a scenario, they would likely be the ones to sound the alarm and would take action to oppose any such practices. If we look at it this way, the only proper conclusion is that political indoctrination in schools, be it liberal or conservative, and be it blatant or subtle, is indeed a very important issue as it goes against the very grain of the pluralism that allows our system of government to operate from century to century.

Finally, I do not believe that focusing the schools' efforts on creating politically neutral school environments will detract from teachers' and administrators' other responsibilities such as their efforts to eradicate bullying and to improve education and test scores. Once this ship is righted by implementing the proper overview, there should not need to be any real effort exerted at all to ensure politically neutral classrooms. Whether the children understand the current debate or not, they will only benefit from an environment devoid of indoctrination where the teachers' focus is on character, integrity, civic mindedness, knowledge and critical thinking.

On that day, she joined her mother and father and sister, Josephine Huskins Watson, to form our special foursome. Jane lived a beautiful and exceptional life in Greenwich; Scottsdale, AZ; Zug, Switzerland; and New York, NY.

Jane was educated at Greenwich Academy beginning in preschool at the Cowan Center, through Group 5. She then attended middle school at the International School of Zug and Luzern while her family resided in Zug. She returned to Greenwich to attend the Greenwich Academy Upper School, graduating in 2018. She attended Columbia University and completed her Bachelor's Degree in American Studies, graduating with honors in May 2022.

From the first days of her life, Jane made an extraordinary impression on everyone who encountered her. She was kind, compassionate, generous, talented, brilliant, funny, and beautiful. According to many of her teachers, she not only excelled in her studies but also made the classroom a better place for everyone. She earned many academic awards over the years, including Class Valedictorian for Groups 10, 11, and 12. She enjoyed being a Peer Leader her senior year, which fit well with her passion for teaching and counseling, as well as her intense interest in other people and their well-being. No mere brainiac, Jane thoroughly enjoyed athletics, taking up basketball, volleyball, and rowing while in Switzerland. Back at Greenwich Academy, she rowed for four years and served as co-captain of the medal-winning Greenwich Academy Varsity Crew Team during her junior and senior years.

Jane's biggest passion, though, was for music. There was always music in the Watson home, and Jane and Josie both developed an encyclopedic knowledge of the art form, enjoying everything from medieval madrigals to the latest synth-pop and neo-disco. But Jane was more than a listener — she adored singing, playing guitar, performing, and creating her own songs. Jane had a stunning voice and a remarkable stage presence. Her perfect pitch, angelic tone, and clear enjoyment of her performances wowed everyone who saw her in musical theater productions at Greenwich Academy and Brunswick School, with her band in the Massey Theater Black Box, or as president of the Greenwich Academy Madrigals. At Columbia, she honed her bedroom-pop skills and rocked the campus and Spotify with her original songs under the moniker "Miss Anthropopscene," from the feminist neo-disco anthem "Birth Control" in 2019 to the latest fan favorite, "Trees." She showed a softer side of her musical abilities in the moving ballad "Million Things," which appeared on Ilandz's 2019 album, True Thoughts. About her music, Jane often said she wanted her fans to "think as well as dance." They did, and they will.

While at Columbia, Jane cherished her work for the Roger Lehecka Double Discovery Center, which provides tutoring, college counseling, and other support for high-potential youths from underserved high schools and communities in upper Manhattan, in order to prepare them for a successful college experience. As an undergrad, Jane was in charge of recruiting and scheduling Columbia students to tutor the high-schoolers in various subjects. This past summer, she started working for the DDC directly, while studying to complete her New York State teacher's certification so that she could pursue her intended career as a secondary-school teacher and education policy-shaper.

During her final semester at Columbia, Jane fell into the grips of an acute depression. Such an illness is difficult to comprehend for anyone who has not experienced or witnessed it up close. Those who were with her these past several months know that it was a hideous beast, one that wrapped its toxic tentacles around her and would not let go. Jane fought mightily and bravely to overcome it, under the exceptional and loving care of some of the top providers in our area. Over the course of the summer, in the company of loving family and friends, she enjoyed several happy and hopeful interludes, in Connecticut, New York, Cape Cod, Nantucket, Virginia, and Tennessee. In the end, though, the depression was relentless and ultimately catastrophic. Our family urges anyone who gets a glimpse of such a situation to recognize how insidious it can be, and to seek assistance as soon as possible.

Jane will be profoundly missed by those who survive her, including her mother, father, and sister; her grandmothers, Amburn Huskins Power of Athens, GA and Celia Powell Healey of Fort Worth, TX; great-aunt and namesake Lanier Watson of New Orleans, LA; and aunts, uncles, and cousins Anna Brune and her husband, Mike, of Flemington, NJ, Anna's daughter, Natalia Schustak, and her husband, Jeremy, and their children, Claire and Alice; Dr. William V. Healey III of Seattle, WA and his children, Caroline and Ben; Peter Healey and his wife, Ashley, of Fort Worth, TX and their children, Preston and Mary Paige; Michael Healey and his wife, Helen, of Dallas, TX; Will Power and his wife, Kathy, of Warner Robins, GA and their son, Sean; and Jay Watson and his wife, Susan, of Oxford, MS and their children, Katherine and Judson, and Judson's wife, Marissa.

The family will hold a private burial. A memorial service to celebrate Jane's extraordinary life will be held at the Greenwich Academy Massey Theater on Saturday, Nov. 26 at 11a.m. Those wishing to make a donation in Jane's memory should please consider the Roger Lehecka Double Discovery Center at Columbia University (see their website instructions: ddc.college.columbia.edu).

She was an active member of the First Congregational Church of Greenwich (serving as a deaconess at one point), and was also involved in many volunteer activities, including teaching English as a second language, and guiding at the Greenwich Audubon Center. In later years, she and Stan spent their winters at Smoke Tree Ranch (STR) in Palm Springs, CA, where she enjoyed nature walks in the desert and participating in STR community activities. She loved the outdoors, and enjoyed swimming, tennis, hiking and tai chi. She was gregarious and naturally gifted at connecting with people. A lifelong learner, she was enthusiastic about

Your Horoscope for Next Week

LIBRA

24 Sept-23 Oct You need to admit an error of judgement - if only to yourself. As Mercury changes direction there is no point in denying your guilt - it will be obvious for all to see. You don't have to be perfect, nor do others expect you to be. So you made a mistake - so what?

SCORPIO

24 Oct-22 Nov As analytical Mercury turns direct it will pay you to think things through with more care and attention to detail. Facts and figures you have managed to ignore in the past will not be so easy to ignore now, nor should you want to do so - they can't hurt you.

SAGITTARIUS

23 Nov-21 Dec You need to keep an open mind and look at every possibility that comes your way. The more unusual an option, the more likely it is to benefit you. In your career, especially, the more open you are to new ideas the more likely you will be to impress those in authority.

CAPRICORN

22 Dec-20 Jan Now that mind planet Mercury is moving in your favour again you will find it easier to see the big picture, and there is no room in it for petty squabbles and trivial differences of opinion. You may not agree with everyone but you can agree to disagree.

AQUARIUS

21 Jan-19 Feb Sometimes you obsess over things for no good reason, then wonder why you were so out of touch with reality. Over the next few days you will come to your senses and realise a certain worry is no longer worth the effort. Don't get so easily trapped by your emotions again.

PISCES

20 Feb-20 March The harder it was to get your ideas across in recent weeks the easier it will be now that articulate Mercury is moving direct again. No doubt there are 1,001 things you want to say but don't try to say them all at once. People are confused enough as it is.

ARIES

21 March-20 April At times, recently, you came close to clobbering certain people, especially at work where destructive, rather than constructive, criticism was the norm. Hopefully that will now alter but, if not, you might take it as a sign that it is time to move on to a happier environment.

TAURUS

21 April-21 May Do not be too proud to admit, if only to yourself, that a change of course is needed. The planets indicate you have been heading down the wrong path for some time, as what happens this week will make abundantly clear. Don't let your ego stop you from turning back.

GEMINI

22 May-21 June At times it is easy to think you are seeing a situation for what it is when you are seeing only what you want to see. This week you will realise your view of a situation has, at best, been slanted or, at worst, a mirror image of what it should be. It is time to get back to reality.

CANCER

22 June-23 July No matter how good a communicator you are your words will not always come out as you intend. So if you are at cross purposes with someone you usually get along with it is not the end of the world and is unlikely to last. Mercury's change of course will resolve it.

LEO

24 July-23 Aug You may feel the world is against you but you know it is not true. You can also sense the tide is starting to turn and your recent bad luck was just a passing phase. The more you let yourself believe that the more likely it is that your good fortune will return very soon.

VIRGO

24 Aug-23 Sept You should know that no matter how tough life seems things usually work out all right in the end. So resist the urge to take radical steps to alter your current situation when all that needs to change is the way you think. That will happen on its own this week.

Greenwich Polo Club Wraps Up

BY LIZ LEAMY

Last Sunday, the Greenwich Polo Club wrapped up its 2022 season in stellar style with two edge-of-your-seat Pro-Am matches.

Playing in front of more than 4,000 spectators, there were four total teams with each featuring a roster of world and nationally ranked high goalers as well as amateur players from the New York-metropolitan area that designated this afternoon as one for the books.

Playing with speed, skill and agility, these powerful, talented and skilled athletes, both equine and human, held the full attention of the crowd throughout the entire tournament.

In the final tally, Loudmouth/Willow Tree, the formidable team based out of Westchester that is lead by Andrew Siebert, a high goal player who is Chief Executive Officer of Roller Rabbit who President and Chief Executive Officer of Loudmouth Golf, the American sportswear company famous for its colorful trousers, took home top honors.

The Loudmouth brigade, who wore colorful jerseys that popped out on the field and played with fire and focus wound up on top of the leaderboard in this heated faceoff against Steel Polo/Roxbury Raider, Round Hill and Steel Polo/Hameets, all teams of which are based in and around the New York metropolitan area.

"It was a lot of fun to play out there today. Everyone played a good game and the crowd was great," said Brandon Phillips, the renowned high goaler who was a high scorer in this tournament. "It's terrific to be here and this is just an amazing polo club."

The other players agreed. "It was so exciting to be out there today and it's incredible to be here playing," said Scott Sorbaro, the 24 year-old Westchester up-and-coming member of the Loudmouth team who was named Most Valuable Player of the match. "I just wanted to play my best and I am very honored to be given the [MVP] award. I wasn't expecting it at all."

Sorbaro, who just started playing polo three years ago, added that it was thrilling to play at the Greenwich Polo Club, which is famously known as one of the premiere high-goal destinations of the sport.

"It has always been my dream to play here," said Sorbaro, who said he grew up watching matches at the Greenwich Polo Club. "This is the best field I've ever played on and the players and horses here are incredible. I love playing and train as much as possible so I can keep getting better."

Certainly, the signature gold standard of the Greenwich Polo Club is much of the reason it has become known as such a unique and spectacular warm-weather outdoor professional sports destination for so many hundreds of thousands of people, especially who are from the New York metropolitan area, over the years.

"This has been a wonderful way to end the season. You can watch polo while having fun with your family and friends. It's a place where you can just 'put your feet up' and relax," said Stephanie Dunn Ashley, a Greenwich resident who is Chief Executive Officer of the American Red Cross New York North chapter and former 13 year Director of Special Events at Greenwich Hospital. "It's been a beautiful day here and you can see everyone is having such a good time. This is an amazing place."

Others concurred. "The Greenwich Polo Club is fantastic and there is just so much happening here. There's the world-class polo, of course, along with the incredible social atmosphere. That, along with all of the food, cocktails, shopping, barbeque, music and dancing helps make it all such a dynamic and fun environment," said Jennifer Moore of Greenwich who has been attending matches at the Greenwich Polo Club with her family and friends since 2019. "They've tapped into practically everything anyone could want here. I also think the [selfie] wall with the club logo, ivy and flowers and tables and seats and umbrellas along the sidelines are a big draw for people. You can see that everyone is having a great time."

The theme of excitement seemed to be the main theme of this day, especially for the Barbados Tourism Marketing Inc., a business partner of the Greenwich Polo Club, as well.

Throughout the afternoon, the expansive Barbados Tourism Marketing Inc. tent area was teeming with hundreds of people celebrating Barbados Day with the many offerings of food, rum and other delicious things. (In addition, Barbados Tourism Marketing Inc. also held a fashion photo contest with a photo booth, which was a big hit at the club.)

"This has been the best day ever. Nothing beats bringing the culture of the Barbados to Greenwich," said Eusi Skeete, Director of the U.S. Division of Barbados Tourism Marketing Inc. "I always look forward to coming here. It's the perfect place to be and this is the perfect mix for us. This is such a dynamic and beautiful venue and everyone is always so friendly. That, along with the fact that the Barbados is the polo capital of the Caribbean makes this an ideal situation for us."

Certainly, Skeete's words seem to ring true as the Greenwich Polo Club has come to represent such a special and unique place a place that provides entertainment, enjoyment, inspiration and good memories for so many, and that, in the final tally, is everything.

Charles Schrohe Sets Greenwich Boys Golf Team Record

By DAVID FIERRO

In the Greenwich High School's boys golf team's first match of the season against Brien McMahon at Griffith E. Harris Golf Course, Cardinals senior Charles Schrohe shot a 4-under-par 32, tying the team record with four other GHS golfers. Today, Schrohe broke that impressive record.

Schrohe shot an eye-opening 5-under-par 30 for Greenwich in its match against rival New Canaan at Greenwich Country Club today, breaking the team record for nine holes. His record-breaking performance sparked Greenwich to a 145-155 win over two-time defending FCIAC champion New Canaan.

Schrohe, who will play Division I golf at Lehigh University next year, also tied an FCIAC record with today's round of 30, which he shot at the No. 1 spot in the lineup.

Junior Owen Duda carded a 36 at the No. 2 spot, while junior Jack Hopper (No. 4) shot a 39 for Greenwich, which is 12-0 on the season. New Canaan's record stands at 9-1. Sophomore Aj Enslein (No. 3) shot a 40, while senior Dylan Harris (No. 5) carded a 42 for the Cardinals, who host Darien tomorrow at Burning Tree Country Club in Greenwich at 3:30 p.m. Cullen McCarthy registered a round of 34 for the Rams.

Schrohe's team record-breaking round of 32 came one day after he also earned medalist honors in the squad's victory against Ridgefield at Griffith E. Harris Golf Course, posting a 36.

GHS Filed Hockey Cruised to a Convincing 8-0 Win Over St. Joseph

Klara Mueffelmann scored four goals in Greenwich's 8-0 road win vs. St. Joseph.

By DAVID FIERRO

Receiving three goals apiece from senior Klara Mueffelmann and sophomore Kate Donnellan, Greenwich High School's field hockey team cruised to a convincing 8-0 win over St. Joseph in a game held on Tuesday at St. Joseph in Trumbull.

"Klara and Kate continue to dominate the forward line," Greenwich coach Megan Wax said.

Indeed, Mueffelmann and Donnellan scored early and often for the Cardinals, who improved their record to 4-2 with the road triumph.

Sophomore Stella Thibeault opened the game's scoring, tallying off a Donnellan assist with 9:20 remaining in the first quarter. Mueffelmann's unassisted goal gave GHS a 2-0 lead at the 3:41 mark of the first quarter.

Donnellan set up Mueffelmann for a tally in the final minute of the opening quarter. Following a scoreless second quarter, Mueffelmann scored off a penalty corner, making it 4-0 with 2:24 to go in the third quarter. Donnellan scored early in the fourth quarter off a pass from freshman Emilia Arroyo for the Cards' fifth goal.

Mueffelmann, Donnellan and junior Aly Janssen notched fourth-quarter goals for the victors.

"It was another great team win and we're hoping to keep the momentum going," said Wax, whose squad has outscored the opposition, 25-0, in their last three games.

Up next for Greenwich is a big matchup against rival New Canaan on Thursday at 4:30 p.m. at Cardinal Stadium. The game will be a rematch of last season's CIAC Class L Tournament quarterfinals won by New Canaan, 1-0, in double overtime.

WILDLY SUCCESSFUL

The Red Panda

By JIM KNOX

Nature has a habit of presenting us with conundrums. From flightless birds to duck-billed mammals, to sprinting tortoises (yes, they exist!), we are constantly astounded and rewarded when Mother Nature reveals her rule-breaking handiwork. As humans, we crave order. We want a nice, logical place for everything and everything in its place. Thank goodness nature embraces originality and innovation because it's through these rule-breaking creatures and the, can't-quite-put-a-name-to-a-face beasts, that we learn so much.

Leading the ranks of these species is Ailurus fulgens or the Red Panda. This medium-sized mammal is widely known by all, yet simultaneously, well understood by few. Commonly called cat-bear, Firefox and Lesser Panda (they're particularly sensitive about this one), the Red Panda is related to many, more familiar beasts. Distantly related to Giant Pandas, and closer kin to raccoons, Red Pandas are the only living member of their taxonomic family, the Ailuridae. Not surprisingly, the Red Panda possesses familiar and highly advantageous traits from their distant cousins. From its stocky, bear-shaped body, to its foxlike ears, and ringed, raccoon-like tail, this modest beast is superbly adapted to an arboreal life among the cool mountainous forests of the Himalayan region.

Originally classified as a carnivore, the Red Panda possesses stout jaws and sharp teeth yet these omnivores prefer to eat tender bamboo shoots and leaves over meat, 98% of the time. Rounding out their diet with the occasional fruit, insect, bird egg, bird or small mammal, Red Pandas adapt well to seasonal scarcity and abundance, exploiting available food sources. Reaching 3.5 feet in length and tipping the scales at 7-14 pounds, the panda is the size of a fox. Like its distant cousin the Red Fox, this beast also sports a flaming red coat with occasional gold highlights. Rounding out its appearance, the panda possesses a pointy snout, white patches of facial fur, black fur extending to its legs and bear-like paws, and a long ringed bushy tail, tipped with black or white. This coloration actually aids them as camouflage among the reddish-brown mosses and white lichens in the Fir canopy of their native forests.

A closer look reveals a creature boasting specialized skills. The panda's reddish-brown “tear marks” extend from its eyes to the corners of its mouth and serve to keep the sun's glare out of its eyes. The raccoon-like tail aids in providing both exceptional balance high above the forest floor, and in warming the panda's face and body when draped over to conserve warmth. Semi-retractable claws provide excellent gripping capability when climbing and the panda's extraordinarily flexible ankles enable this beast to climb headfirst down tree trunks. Like Giant Pandas, and closer kin to raccoons, Red Pandas are the only living member of their taxonomic family, the Ailuridae. Not surprisingly, the Red Panda possesses familiar and highly advantageous traits from their distant cousins. From its stocky, bear-shaped body, to its foxlike ears, and ringed, raccoon-like tail, this modest beast is superbly adapted to an arboreal life among the cool mountainous forests of the Himalayan region.

remarkably raises its metabolic rate every few hours to search for food.

My work confers the privilege of working with animals such as the Red Panda. They are part of a program known as an S.S.P. or Species Survival Plan, a highly-coordinated worldwide effort—administered regionally at Connecticut's Beardsley Zoo—to breed endangered creatures, educate guests and restore species populations to the wild. Over the years, I've found that when guests can relate to an animal or species, they are far more likely to protect them. It's natural to want to protect what we have grown to understand and love...or at least care about.

The Red Panda is considered one of the world's few “Peter Pan” animals who never outgrows its youthful appearance...and it is precisely this fact that aids this animal who needs all the help it can muster. With a habitat under increasing threat from climate shift, illegal logging and other environmental degradation, the Red Panda needs a superpower. Enter cuteness. In nature, cute doesn't exactly yield dividends, yet in the human world, cute can engender caring, rally support, and generate conservation action. As a species, when we protect cute, we extend that protection to all of the plants and animals who live in the same habitat. For every Red Panda or Sugar Glider, there is an Atlantic Hagfish or Marabou Stork benefiting from their more photogenic neighbors.

In the panda, we see a creature who is not quite what it seems on the surface. We encounter a beast with one set of obvious characteristics and another, more discrete compliment of on-demand traits which it employs with great effect. Perhaps not the boldest creature, but highly capable when necessary. Familiar to most but truly understood by few. It is a rule-breaking innovator when the situation calls for it and a creature whose appeal belies its capability. Equal parts fierce and cute...the Red Panda gains both our respect and our caring. Perhaps in the panda, we see a bit of ourselves. If you haven't become acquainted with these humble creatures, I encourage you to take some time out of your busy week to visit them, read about them, check out a “Panda Cam” at <https://www.beardsleyzoo.org/outdoor-red-panda-cam.html> or otherwise get to know the little beast behind that adorable face.
