In a decisive judgment issued on Tuesday, Stamford Superior Court ruled in favor of Fred DeCaro III, the Republican Registrar of Voters for the Town of Greenwich, in a lawsuit that sought to invalidate the results of the March Republican Town Committee (RTC) primaries in Districts 2 and 8.

The case, brought by plaintiffs Susan Schieffelin, George Hritz, Michael DeVita, and Gail Lauridsen, aimed to compel DeCaro to reject primary petitions they claimed were improperly circulated. The court's decision followed a one-day trial that included pre-trial briefs, three hours of direct and cross-examination of DeCaro, oral arguments, and post-trial briefs.

Schieffelin and Hritz, candidates for the RTC in District 2, and Lauridsen and DeVita, candidates for RTC in District 8, were endorsed for RTC seats on January 9, 2024. However, prior to January 31, petitions for a primary election contesting these endorsements were circulated by residents, including candidates Jill Kelly, Michael Erensen, Janet Freiheit, and Caren St. Phillip.

The plaintiffs argued that these petitions violated Connecticut General Statute 9-410(c), which prohibits candidates from circulating petitions for other candidates. Despite these allegations, DeCaro maintained that primary.

On March 5, 2024, the in Schieffelin and Hritz losing their seats on the RTC, while Lauridsen and DeVita retained theirs. The close results were confirmed by a re-canvass.

Judge Robert Genuario dismissed the claims of DeVita and Lauridsen, stating that they retained their seats regardless of the court's decision due to their primary victory. The court ruled in favor of DeCaro, concluding petitions.

The thing about graduation speeches is they are mostly wasted on the soon-to-be graduates, who are busy contemplating their postgraduation revelry or distracted by the cute classmate a few seats over and the drop of sweat that is dripping down their backs beneath the polyester academic regalia. (Unless, of course, they are listening to Roger Federer at the upcoming Dartmouth graduation - he will unquestionably garner everyone's attention.)

And although many of the speeches are full of good advice, cliches (follow your passion, today is the first day of the rest of your life, etc.), and lessons learned from the speaker's life experience, each of the graduates will need to live their own life to earn the wisdom that is so freely given at the ceremony.

With no disrespect to the speakers who presented at my graduations long ago, I do not remember what was said and I do not remember who spoke (not Roger Federer).

Still, I love graduation speeches - and graduations for that matter - and this year it is personal.

Our baby is graduating from high school, and I find myself caught up in a long list of lasts, scrolling through old family pictures, and reliving memories. Proud and teary, I am what one might call a hot mess.

I am in the throes of it figuring out logistics, who is coming and when, how many seats to save - and now that the short white dress for our soon-to-be graduate has been unearthed, what the heck am I going to wear? Because it's all about me, right? And while many are preparing for graduations in their own families (be it from kindergarten, middle school, high school or college), all of these signify transitions - the leaving behind of the known and the preparation for the unknown. For parents, this also means another incremental step in the difficult process of letting go, camouflaged by the pomp and circumstance. In the past, at this time of year, I have offered short snippets from former graduation speeches, but this year I have decided instead to pivot. (If you are aching for a good speech, Google Jerry Seinfeld's 2024 commencement address at Duke.) So, while we wait for the picture-worthy moment when our son or daughter crosses the stage to accept a diploma, let me flip things around and share with you three lessons I have learned from our soon-to-be graduate. Our children are great teachers.

COLUMN: ON MY WATCH It Was a Celebration of Joy of 90 Years of Choral Singing

BY ANNE W. SEMMES

Last Saturday evening there was an historic gathering of extraordinary choral talent and Anglican musical tradition celebrating 90 years of choir singing at Christ Church Greenwich. That Anglican tradition was first seen in the presence of the four British talents leading the 100 choristers: Jamie Hitel, Director of Music, Dr. Phillip Moore, Visiting Artist/Composer, James O'Donnell, Visiting Artist-in Residence and former Organist/ Master of Choristers at Westminster Abbey - now Professor at Yale's Institute of Sacred Music, and lastly, Jonathan Vaughn, Associate Director of Music, and organist supreme.

The backdrop for that singing was a British-made organ by Harrison & Harrison - makers of the organ in Westminster Abbey - that was installed at Christ Church in 2022, as the company's largest organ built in America to date.

Jamie Hitel welcomed the 400 attendees with addressing the power of his chorister organization "for character building and fellowship, as well as for musical training and service to Christ." And he told how it had begun in 1934 with his predecessor Claude Means "putting together a new choir consisting of men and boys." Since then, "hundreds of children have been shaped by the discipline of regular rehearsal and teamwork...They in turn have used the gift of music to shape others in times of joy, sorrow, Thanksgiving, repentance and celebration."

Hitel gave thanks also [with a touch of humor] to "our unsung heroes, choir parents...We couldn't have done it without your gifts of time, talent, and treasure, not to mention the thousands of really enjoyable trips up and down the Post Road."

He described the celebratory concert as "showcasing six of our seven choirs" in a selection that "showcases the breadth and depth of repertoire unique to each choir." And that program selection also reflected Joy that is this year's Christ Church's 275th celebration theme

O'Donnell.

Featured as well was the Christ Church Bell Choir playing "Amazing Grace" with its famous words plaintively written in the 18th century by John Newton of England, formerly involved in the slave trade "but pardoned to preach the faith." That tune would only come a near century later from America's Deep South.

A lovely "harvest anthem that emphasizes our responsibility for the environment" was "Look at the World" with its stanzas including, "Think of the spring/Think of the warmth of summer/Bring in the harvest/ Before the winter's cold/ Everything has a season/Til it is gathered to the fathers fold." It was sung by the Choir of Men & Boys and the St. Cecelia Choir of Girls, with lyrics and music by English composer and conductor John Rutter and led by Jamie Hitel.

With the organ playing a major role Hitel had told, the choirs would come together for a "grand conclusion of Parry's "Hear My Words Ye People." The singers began, "Hear my words, ye people/give ear unto me all ye that have knowledge/ Let us choose to us judgement, /let us know among ourselves what is good." And that finale would include the youngest St. Nicholas Choir (ages 5), "adding icing to the cake." And that they certainly did.

But now, a closer look at those Christ Church choirs. There is the Christ Church Choir of Men and Boys, the St Cecilia Choir of Girls, the Christ Church Singers, the St. Nicholas Choir, and that Christ Church Bell Choir. "Our choristers are those of school age, from 7 to 18," shared Jonny Vaughn. And in the celebratory concert, he added, "We had about 40 choristers singing, 40 adults, including 10 alumni, and 20 St. Nicholas Choir members."

Vaughn had praise for the "semi chorus of our high school seniors, that included solos sung by Annie Murphy (soprano) and Ethan Cooper (baritone) who were featured in the concluding Parry piece of 'Hear my words, ye people."

Jamie Hitel welcomed the 400 attendees with addressing the power of his chorister organization "for character building and fellowship, as well as for musical training and service to Christ."

Attendees could read the history of the selected pieces sung in their programs, as with the joyful opening selection, Charles Hubert Hastings Parry's anthem, "I Was Glad," sung at all British coronations since 1902, with the combined choirs directed by O'Donnell. There was also Judith Weir's "I love all beauteous things," with text by poet Robert Bridges, sung at Queen Elizabeth II's 90th birthday, as sung by the Christ Church Singers, directed by Vaughn also cited this celebratory year as "a great year of renaissance for the boys choir post pandemic," with choristers mostly signing on since last September – "average age nine years old!" Then there are those who have hung in for numerous years such as high school senior Evelyn Fitts, who is walking away this summer with fond memories.

"I've been in the choir for six years," said Fitts, "and it's been such a wonderful community

The Eagle Scouts are Soaring in Greenwich

By Ellie Sileo

The Eagle Scouts of Greenwich have been impressing and blessing the community with their projects for over a century. The history of the Scouts is fascinating and a continuation of this legacy can be seen across recent projects from the Greenwich Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

During a conversation with Jim Heavey, Greenwich's Chief of Police, we added up the hours of hard work that troops have put into the last eight Eagle projects, to find out that the scouts have acquired a whopping total of 1,360 hours of dedication in the last ten months. Through explaining the Eagle Scout Service Project Process, Chief Heavey shares that Eagle Scouts commit to working on a project that, "is a gift to the community and demonstrates leadership."

Tom Pankosky, registrar for the Greenwich Council, emphasizes that, "the impact on the community really is widespread," and that, "the parks, churches, and schools have always been beneficiaries."

Sciulla is a junior at Greenwich High School and in January, he led a troop of 35 individuals for a 139 hour long project to create 1 1/2 miles of new trail for Pemberwick Park. During this process, Scout Sciulla also led the creation of a GIS mapping systeman innovation which uses a computer system to obtain and map data in relation to positions on Earth's surface-, the placement of a new kiosk at the entrance, and the removal of invasive plants in the park. All of these additions allow the community to better interact with our town's nature.

In addition to Sciulla's project, many recent projects have focused on the improvement and beautification of the town's parks. Both Eagles Ethan Miklautsch, senior at GHS at the time, and Aedan Browning, junior at GHS, worked in Laddin's Rock Park in Old Greenwich for their projects. These two projects were completed over 222 hours by 19 individuals total. Miklautsch's and Browning's leadership of their troops led to major developments for this park including the removal of invasive plant species, the addition of a kiosk, and the planting of tree saplings to control erosion.

Similar ambitions were taken to protect and enhance the Babcock Preserve by Eagle Catherine Tucker, senior at Rye Country Day School, and the Helen Binney Kitchel Natural Park by Eagle Mark Parry, senior at GHS.

Kevin O'Shea, Scout Executive, sums up that at the end of the day, "the projects they do support the community and the town of Greenwich in many ways."

Eagle Catherine Tucker, can all enjoy now in the park," essentials to support those and eat every day!" scout of the Greenwich Council BSA, implemented a kiosk for the entrance of the Babcock Preserve with a map of the park, a list of dog rules, and dog waste bag dispensers attached to it, while also cleaning up the invasive plants in the entrance and parking lot areas. Tucker's troop of 16 individuals dedicated 202 hours to this project. These improvements aim to benefit the attraction and longevity of the Babcock Preserve.

At the Helen Binney Kitchel Eagle Mark Parry's troop of 15 individuals spent 233 hours building a bridge for hikers and bikers to cross the river safely. Beyond the bridge, Parry's troop removed invasive plant species and added new plants to transform the look of the park's entrance. This new bridge and beautification of the entrance will increase safety and attraction within the park.

Chief Heavey noted that these Eagles have made "enhancements to what we

Greenwich Hospital President Diane Kelly to Retire at End of Year

By Robert Williamson

Diane P. Kelly, DNP, RN, the President of Greenwich Hospital, has announced her plans to retire at the end of this calendar year, ending a career that spans more than four decades. Kelly has served as the hospital's president since June 2020 and has been the chief nursing executive for Yale New Haven Health (YNHHS) since 2022.

"During my five years working with Diane, I couldn't have asked for a better partner," said Greenwich Hospital Board Chair W. Robert Berkley, Jr. "She led our hospital during the height of COVID, deftly guiding us through some of the most challenging days, yet never lost sight of the clinical growth plan for Greenwich Hospital. Diane's commitment to bringing new technologies, programs, and physicians to Greenwich has enabled patients to access services not typically available in a community hospital setting. She has set Greenwich Hospital on a trajectory of growth that will continue for generations to come."

Kelly's healthcare career began at Berkshire Medical Center, where she advanced from a staff nurse to various clinical and leadership roles, including Psychiatry & Behavioral Health Clinical Leader, Director of Patient Safety, and Vice President of Quality & Safety. She was promoted to Chief Operating Officer in 2008, a position she held until joining Greenwich Hospital a decade later.

"Diane has been a dedicated and passionate leader throughout her career and is widely respected in the hospital and nursing community," said Christopher O'Connor, CEO of Yale New Haven Health. "Since joining Greenwich Hospital as Chief Operating Officer in 2018, she has made a clear and positive launched its first campaign in impact on the entire health 25 years, the $125 million Arc system. and to work in collaboration with extraordinary men and women dedicated to caring for those who trust us with their health care," said Kelly. "It is a true privilege to have served on the Yale New Haven Health leadership team. I am also tremendously grateful that I have had the opportunity to be part of the Yale New Haven Nursing Division, working alongside the finest nurses I have known in my 40-year career. Health care has been not just a job, but an intrinsic part of who I am.'

Kelly reflected on her decision to retire to the Greenwich Sentinel, stating, "It's time. I've had a 40-year extraordinary career in healthcare, and it just feels like the right time. There is no really one reason. I've always thought it was important to make a transition when you really love what you're doing. I always think it's important to say I'm feeling good about the things I've done, I love coming to work, so it's a good time. No regrets."

HMTX Industries Unveils Groundbreaking Eco-Friendly World Headquarters

By Peter Barhydt

Addressing the growing issue of climate change and reaffirming its commitment to sustainability, HMTX Industries unveiled its new World Headquarters in Norwalk, Connecticut. The 24,000-square-foot building, designed by McLennan Design and its founder Jason F. McLennan, is one of the greenest structures in the state. The headquarters, which broke ground in April 2021, was awarded by BuildGreenCT's former component, CT Green Building Council, for exemplary performance in both energy and health.

"Our new HMTX headquarters is designed to represent the core values on which our company was built and has grown," said Harlan Stone, CEO of HMTX Industries. "What I refer to as our House Up On The Hill merges nature and sustainability with innovation and collaboration. It provides a unique space for artists. engineers, developers, and architects, as well as creative and disruptive thinkers, to exchange ideas and thoughts in this modern-day salon."

One of the building's unique features is its design, which allows it to sit above the ground to preserve as much of the existing landscape as possible. Constructed using only the healthiest non-toxic materials, the building will generate more energy on-site than it uses, produce zero carbon emissions, and capture and reuse rainwater. The ecologically conscious facility also includes spaces for artists-in-residence design studios.

The surrounding landscape, designed by Keith E. Simpson Associates of New Canaan, faced challenging constraints, including retaining large existing trees, featuring extensive rock ledge outcroppings, and managing steeply sloping grades.

The landscape incorporates rain gardens for stormwater management, new water features, and additional edible plantings for wildlife habitat and gathering spaces for people in both large and small groups.

In speaking with the Greenwich Sentinel, Simpson explained "The site was as rugged as they come, before construction started, so maintaining its character and natural functionality while accommodating the new building, gave us challenges at every turn. Safeguarding the very large trees so close to the building itself was always a top priority."

As the landscape matures, newly planted trees are expected replace pre-existing trees that eventually die off. Shrubs and perennial plantings, selected for different areas of the site and benefiting nearby properties.

Simpson added: "After observing building going up, working on the three, very different water features, and with the two acclaimed sculptors was the most exciting time for the project. The innovative, solar driven sculpture by Steven Lowry in the roof garden is remarkable, as are the two continuously interacting wind driven sculptures within the center courtyard by Tim Prentice."

"Working with Harlan on this Living Building Challenge project has been an incredible experience," said Jason F. McLennan, Managing Principal of McLennan Design. "This facility is groundbreaking, not only for its design but for the pioneering product development

HMTX Industries World Headquarters Highlights General Details:

Location: Norwalk, Connecticut Size: Four-story building, approximately 24,000 sq ft

Architect: McLennan Design

Landscape Architect: Keith E. Simpson Associates

Sustainability:

Greenest Building in Connecticut: The HMTX headquarters is on track to become the greenest building in the state.

Living Building Challenge: It is the first project in Connecticut to pursue the Living Building Challenge Petal Certification, the world's most stringent green building rating system.

Energy Positive: The building will produce more renewable energy on-site than it uses annually.

Zero Carbon Emissions: It is an all-electric building designed to operate with zero carbon emissions.

Energy & Carbon:

Solar Power: Over 100% of the building's power demand is met by on-site PV panels, generating an estimated 144,000 kWh/yr in solar power.

Energy Efficiency: Predicted energy use intensity (EUI) of 18, a 60% reduction from baseline office buildings.

Passive Cooling: Utilizes operable windows and skylights for natural cooling.

Water Management:

Rainwater Reuse: Features a rainwater capture and reuse

Low-Flow Fixtures: Utilized throughout the building.

Rain Gardens: Three separate rain gardens treat stormwater naturally, providing on-site retention and infiltration.

Health & Happiness:

Natural Daylighting: Every space benefits from natural daylighting.

Healthy Indoor Air: Uses Red List Free materials and adheres to the highest ventilation standards.

Biophilic Design: Incorporates elements such as a 1,700 sq ft green roof, interior green wall, and natural finish materials.

Artwork: Features artwork by local and worldwide artists, including a 240 sq ft mural.

Educational Programs: Includes building tours, educational events, and signage about regenerative design.

As HMTX Industries continues to pioneer sustainability, the new headquarters stands as a testament to what can be achieved when innovation meets ecological responsibility. Simpson concluded: "It is most gratifying to know that it is Harlan Stone's vision that this work be shared with so many visitors to the property."

Tod's Point One Mile Swim Set for Saturday, July 13

Swim at Tod's Point will be held on Saturday, July 13th.

The event is sponsored by The Greenwich Swim Committee and the YMCA of Greenwich. All proceeds from the One Mile Swim event will go toward supporting the YMCA of Greenwich's Swim School Scholarship Fund, helping to provide swim school instruction and critical water safety skills to local children. Last year, the event raised $2,500 after all race expenses for the YMCA of Greenwich.

With the launch of the YMCA of Greenwich's Safety Around Water program this vear, the YMCA is excited to raise more awareness of the programs and services they offer to help teach water safety skills to children living in our waterfront community.

Race start is 7:30 am and check in opens at 6:30 am. Water temperature should be around 70°F.

Heats will be by age group with colored caps provided. Wetsuits are allowed but competitors wearing wet suits will be ineligible for awards. There will be light refreshments and commemorative T-shirts for all participants.

FEES: $55.00 for entries by July 15, $65 for entries thereafter, $20 for participants 13-17 years of age. NO REFUNDS. In the unlikely

Two Greenwich High School students have completed spring internships at SoundWaters, the region's leader in climate science education. Annie Clark and Lucas Vincent spent five weeks at the organization's Coastal Education Center at Cove Island Park in Stamford. The GHS seniors were part of a larger group of spring interns from several area high schools who, instead of attending classes for the final weeks of their high school careers, did internships to experience a real-world business environment. At SoundWaters, the interns worked every day alongside and under the guidance of SoundWaters professional educators, teaching the science of Long Island Sound to more than 2,000 pre-school, elementary and middle school students from schools across the region. They helped students in classroom and lab settings, as well as on the beach and in boats on Holly Pond where young students do field work.

"SoundWaters is a great organization and this internship gave me some great experience. It was fun to help other students and to learn so much as well," said Annie Clark, who will be attending University of Southern California in the fall. The SoundWaters High School Internship Program is a model for professional development and environmental stewardship. "Our interns develop their job and leadership skills on a daily basis as they perform scientific experiments, aquarium maintenance and assist with our STEM programs, reaching over 100 students each day. The SoundWaters intern program is a powerful learning experience," said Christina Genz, SoundWaters Director of Education.

Don't Make Grandma Cry

As the calendar flips to June, high school seniors across the nation are gearing up for a grand finale that has been a staple of teenage life for generations. At this time, high school seniors across the country experience an inexplicable compulsion to engage in what can only be described as senioritis-fueled shenanigans. From pranks to impromptu parties, these end-of-year antics are as much a tradition as the graduation caps and gowns themselves. While these activities can be a rite of passage, they can also lead to unfortunate consequences. So, let's take a humorous yet earnest look at this perennial phenomenon and offer some light-hearted advice to both students and the adults in their lives. In the immortal words of one educator: Don't make your grandmother cry.

Let's take a leaf out of Ralph Waldo Emerson's book: "It is a happy talent to know how to play."

First off, let's acknowledge a universal truth: high school seniors have been pushing the boundaries of acceptable behavior since the dawn of education. Whether it's TP-ing the principal's house, releasing a flock of chickens in the school hallway, or engineering elaborate practical jokes, seniors have always found creative ways to leave their mark. These escapades are part of what makes high school memorable, providing countless stories to recount at reunions.

In the excitement of pulling off a legendary prank, it's easy to overlook the possible repercussions: disciplinary action, fines, or worse - the dreaded ineligibility to graduate. Picture it: Grandma, dressed in her Sunday best, tears streaming down her face, not because she's is certainly one way to go about life - it feels safe, orderly and organized. And of course, there is nothing wrong with that. It's tried and true, it works.

But what if we improvised? What if our education is best delivered outside of a classroom? What if we pushed the tire out of the groove and onto a path with less indentation?

Our soon to be graduate has showed me just this in the way that she has navigated high school, as well as the plans she has made post-graduation. And for me it is a little scary - where is she going? Will she come back?

But I am proud of her choices as well as her ability to follow her heart and create experiences that are broad and fulfilling, maybe different. She is braver than I am.

2. Why not make it from scratch.

A few months ago, I bought a delicious ginger squash bisque to share with our daughter. She took one sip and said - you know, we can make this ourselves. And off she went to find the ingredients.

We chopped and diced and simmered... and lo and behold, she was right; together we created a really good soup, infinitely better than the one I had purchased. And the time spent side by side was time perfectly spent.

But it's not just soup. She bakes and broils and air fries, and while I often look at cooking as a chore, our daughter enjoys every momenthappy to command the kitchen, but happiest creating for others: Mother's Day scones, a birthday cake, or dinner for friends (and always from scratch).

3. Sometimes it's best to set boundaries.

At our daughter's school, seniors are invited to give a senior talk -something learned, a confession or insight to pass on to the younger students.

It is not mandatory. But me being me, encouraged and nudged (well, maybe pushed and prodded). With my ultimate wisdom, I was sure this was an amazing opportunity to not only practice public speaking, but also to impact. And while our daughter considered it, in the end she decided not to do it.

I was disappointed and let her know. To which she responded that it was her decision

"Boundaries, Mom,

And while many are preparing for graduations in their own families (be it from kindergarten, middle school, high school or college), all of these signify transitions - the leaving behind of the known and the preparation for the unknown.

boundaries."

And, of course, she was right. Hard for me to accept, but this young woman is making good decisions for herself, and she no longer needs me to weigh in unsolicited. And learning to construct boundaries when warranted – even when they are to keep your own mom at arm's length - is a very good skill to learn.

But, alas, here we are. It's time to let go of their hands and let our graduates cross the street (and stage) on their own, throw their caps, and smoke a cigar (if they must.) This is their moment.

And the speeches? Some will be remembered, offered online - even quoted and revered for creativity and wisdom - but mostly not. Because it is not about the speeches. (Unless the speaker is Roger Federer.)

And it's only a little about us. The parents, and the big, dark sunglasses we will wear to hide our tears - shed for both the pride and the loss we feel, hopefully remembering and appreciating the lessons our children have taught us.

But really, it's all about the graduates. Their work, their stumbles and their accomplishments, the institutions that are launching them, the coach or teacher who believed in them, and their peers who lived it with them.

And tomorrow they will start again.

So, to the class of 2024 - and to our very own graduate ...

"You are the future. You are the best and the brightest. Believe in yourself. You did it". Congratulations.

"The students asked me to lighten up."

proud, but because she just found out her favorite grandchild won't be walking across the stage. It's a $\ensuremath{\left| N \text{EWS} \text{BRIEF} \right|}$ scenario no one wants to see, yet it happens.

So, seniors, let's talk strategy. It's possible to have fun without crossing the line into the realm of regrettable decisions. Think of it as the difference between a spirited game of dodgeball and an all-out brawl. One is fun and exhilarating; the other ends with someone calling the police.

To our beloved seniors, the line between a harmless prank or a fun party and a regrettable decision is thinner than you might think. Think twice.

And now, a word to the wise for schools and parents: lighten up a little. We all know that by the time June rolls around, seniors are chomping at the bit to burst free from the confines of academia. While it's important to maintain order and uphold standards, a little understanding goes a long way.

Let's take a leaf out of Ralph Waldo Emerson's book: "It is a happy talent to know how to play." Recognizing the fine line between mischief and mayhem is a skill worth cultivating. Schools can channel this energy by organizing sanctioned events that satisfy the seniors' need for fun while keeping everyone out of trouble. A prank contest with clear guidelines or a senior skip day with planned activities can turn potential chaos into cherished memories.

Parents, remember your own days of youth. Think back to the pranks you pulled and the fun you had. Your guidance can help your kids enjoy these weeks without going overboard. And if you catch them plotting something outrageous, maybe help them find a safer, smarter way to execute their plans. They'll thank you later, especially when they are still showing up for their first day of college.

In the end, high school graduation should be a celebration of achievement and the beginning of new adventures ... filled with laughter and pride, not regret and disappointment.

So, as we celebrate the class of 2024, let's ensure that these days are as joyous and memorable as possible. Seniors, make your mark, but do it in a way that leaves everyone smiling-especially Grandma. Don't make your grandmother cry.

Each vehicle must display a valid disposal permit, and households are limited to one hanging tag.

On Sunday, Greenwich Town Hall hosted a Pride flag-raising event with speeches, live music, and activities. Organized by Allison Kahn and Karsen Vagner, and funded by the Leonard Litz Foundation Circle of Care Center, the event featured remarks from local officials emphasizing community support and the need to oppose anti-LGBTQ legislation.

AROUND TOWN

Greenwich High School student Thomas McKinney will lead a community cleanup at Bible Street Playground in Cos Cob tomorrow, Saturday, June 8, from 2pm to 4pm Sponsored by Greenwich Green and Clean, volunteers can sign up in advance and should bring gloves and wear long pants. For more information, contact litterfreeocean@gmail.com.

The playgrounds at Bruce Park and Cos Cob Park closed this past Wednesday, and will continue to be closed until tomorrow, Saturday, June 8th for maintenance on the safety surfaces. In Bruce Park, the play areas for children aged 2-5 and the upper rock climbing zones are closed, while the section for 5-12-year-olds remains open. The entire playground at Cos Cob Park is closed.

Greenwich Communities' Executive Director Anthony Johnson and Board Chair Sam Romeo held a community meeting to discuss the proposed Strickland Road development, answering residents' questions for nearly two hours. The meeting provided factual information about the project's necessity for Greenwich and its potential to address State 8-30g law requirements. The recorded session is available on the GCTV YouTube page, with more public meetings planned before the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Enrichment and Acceleration

By Clay Kaufman

When my eldest daughter was in 5th grade in public school, she and several other students apparently finished the "project on an animal of your choice" faster than other students, and had nothing to do with a few days left in the project. So each of them were told by the teacher to pick a second animal and do the same project again. And then a third animal. Not surprisingly, my daughter came home complaining. I sympathized with the teacher: many members of her class of 27 students simply needed more time. The situation prompted me to think further about enrichment and acceleration, and how best we can challenge students.

Students learn at different paces, and as parents, we certainly see the differences among children within our family. Those of us who are educators witness the same challenge: how to support all students while engaging students at their appropriate level. A wise educator once shared with me his eternal struggle. "Parents want homogeneous classes," he said. "When you have one student, you have a homogeneous class. But the minute you add a second student, you no longer have a homogeneous class." He was right. Two students rarely learn at exactly the same pace. He also acknowledged the reality that students will not be alone in class, and in fact will often benefit from learning in groups. So what do we do?

There is a delicate balance between enrichment and acceleration. One might define enrichment as the layering of challenges within a particular assignment. For example, in a middle school English class in which students have to write an essay, the basic requirement might be a fiveparagraph essay with an introduction, thesis, conclusion and three examples. How might you enrich that assignment? Some students might pull basic examples from the text. Other students might be ready to choose quotations from the text to incorporate into their essay, and then analyze them. For a strong student who is an eager reader and already proficient in writing an analytical essay, the teacher might have the student choose a second book-or even a poemand write a comparative essay. In math class, where elementary students are first learning about the area of a triangle, rectangle and other basic shapes, students who need enrichment might find the area of a rectangle with a triangular hole in the middle, or with a semicircle carved out. There are many possibilities.

It is helpful for teachers to be able to focus on the same unit with all of their students, so enrichment becomes useful and necessary. Good professional development opportunities help teachers find resources for students, and these days teachers all over the country-who are all looking for enrichment activities for exactly the same topic-are sharing their best ideas, all in the name of helping students do their best.

Sometimes it is appropriate for a student to accelerate-usually in math, science or foreign language. A student who has mastered arithmetic and Pre-Algebra might be ready to take Algebra I in 7th or 8th grade. Not all students need to take Calculus in high school, however, so how do you decide whether a child is ready to accelerate? As parents, we all know how our heart sinks when our children come home from school and say "that class is boring." That might be a sign that they need enrichment or acceleration. Of course, if your enrichment programs that cover topics not usually child comes home from the first week of school and taught in school can therefore be good ways to says "I already know this math," that's usually just challenge a child. Applications of math or science, a sign that the teacher is reviewing key topics early such as engineering, space science or other areas in the year. But I see two kinds of students who can be fun summer activities. In school, it is fair benefit from accelerating: a) students who mature, to ask if there are ways that a teacher can enrich well-organized and capable and whose curiosity the curriculum for our children, recognizing that can be stimulated by moving more quickly and b) bright students with a great knack for the topic to be curious, happy and challenged. Teachers who may not be employing all their study skills are generally desperately trying to reach the and might still be a bit squirrelly, but who rise same balance parents hope for. We are all in this to the occasion when placed in a class with older together. Often an effective way we as parents students. Acceleration is certainly appropriate in can help ensure that our children are getting many cases.

"A wise educator once shared with me his eternal struggle. "Parents want homogeneous classes," he said. "When you have one student, you have a homogeneous class. But the minute you add a second student, you no longer have a homogeneous class."

When does acceleration backfire? In my experience, when "acceleration" means racing through topics without going into depth, just to approaches a teacher and asks for an extra have "covered" the material, students don't benefit. Some summer programs promise a "full year of a parent asks, and it teaches the student a good Algebra in 3 weeks," which is usually ineffective and leads to struggles in higher level math, when material

As parents, we want our children to feel engaged and challenged without being overscheduled. Sometimes after school activities such as a programming class, but students are busy during the school year already. Summer we all-including the teachers-want our children the enrichment they need is to teach them to be effective self-advocates. Although there are times when a parent needs to ask, when a student challenge, it can feel less intimidating than when lesson

Again, we are all in this together, and I have students don't have a strong foundation in the always appreciated it when a student or parent has approached me with a question or a problem (as opposed to a demand): "this is what we are seeing; is there anything we can do together to make things work better?" When we empower students, can be an effective way to engage our children, and when schools and families work together to ensure that each child's experience is enriched in its own way, it's a win for everyone.

Our Journey Through the Wilderness of Life

COLUMN

BY MITCHELL M. HURVITZ

Within our traditional cycle of weekly Torah readings, we begin this week by chanting and studying from the Book of Numbers or Sefer Bamidbar, the fourth of the Five Books of Moses. The 4th Book of our Torah is called "Numbers" in English because several narratives refer to the census taken by the ancient Israelites. However, Bamidbar is a better name for the 4th Book, as the Hebrew translates as "In the Wilderness." The 4th Book tells of the Israelites' wanderings of forty

ALICE SEARS

SEPT. 1, 1925 – MAY 29, 2024

Alice Mary Sears was born in Ogdensburg, NY on September 1, 1925. Alice began her nursing career at A. Barton Hepburn Hospital where she worked for 15 years before relocating to Greenwich, CT in 1960. Alice continued her nursing career at Greenwich Hospital working in the Emergency Department before moving to Respiratory Therapy and eventually the private nursing floors until her retirement in the 1990's.

Alice loved traveling the world with her steadfast group of nursing friends whom she cared for dearly. Always on the lookout for a new adventure and also enjoyed reading. She was a parishioner of St. Mary's Church in Greenwich, CT. She will be remembered for her kind and giving spirit by those she cared for and loved.

Viewing hours were on Thursday, June 6. Interment will be private.

ALEXANDER SALEMME

Alexander "Al" Salemme of Greenwich, CT, died on May 26 in West Palm Beach, Florida, with his daughter and grandson by his side.

Born on February 19, 1948, in West Haven, CT, to Marion Caruso Salemme and Ralph Salemme, Al graduated from West Haven High School and later, in 1974, began a career in the grocery business with Grade A Markets, owned by the Cingari Family. While at Grade A, he became an integral part of the produce, bakery, and floral departments. Over the years, Sam Cingari and Al created a special bond that few are lucky enough to share. In fact, Al adopted the entire Cingari Family as if they were his own and they have always held a special place in Al's heart. Al cared deeply about his work and his employees. He relished the opportunity to share his knowledge by mentoring anyone who was interested in learning about his passion. Al was always there to offer support and guidance. Whether employee, friend, family or stranger, if he could be of assistance, you knew Al would lend a hand. Al's friends meant the world to him. They made his days brighter and Al reflected that brightness back. Al could walk into any local restaurant, and everyone knew him by name. Some may call Al a legend, but Al knew that his success was only due to the amazing people around him. Al inspired many, but many inspired him, too. Most anyone who knew him also knew Al was an avid wine connoisseur. True to form and character, he was always happy to teach his friends as much as he could about his favorite grapes. Al was always up to share a tasting. Al's talents were also on full display when he hosted the best house parties in Fairfield County. Al owned four dozen wine glasses to ensure that each of his guests had their own glass. There was no plastic at Al's home! If Al came to your home for dinner, he would most likely find his way to the kitchen to help create an "ALevated" experience.

He was pre-deceased by his parents, Marion Caruso Salemme and Ralph Salemme, his sister, Marie Colucci, and his brothers, Edmond Caruso and Richard Caruso, Sr.

A Wake service took place on the afternoon of Monday, June 3 at the Nicholas F. Cognetta Funeral Home & Crematory, Stamford, CT. A Mass of Christian Burial was celebrated on Tuesday morning, June 4, at Our Lady Star of the Sea Church, Stamford. The interment was private.

MAXINE IZZO

Maxine Hall Izzo, age 98, of Harrisburg, PA and formerly Old Greenwich CT, passed away on May 23. She was born on November 23, 1925, in Groveton, NH.

Maxine, known as "Cinny" to her loved ones, had a remarkable career as a registered nurse and worked at various prestigious institutions, including Columbia Presbyterian Women and Babies Hospital in New York City, Stamford Hospital in Connecticut, the Visiting Nurses Association, and The Sterling Glen Assisted Living Center. Her dedication and passion for nursing served as an inspiration to all.

Maxine graduated from Groveton High School (Groveton,NH) in 1944 and she completed training at the Mary Fletcher Hospital School of Nursing (Burlington, VT) in 1946. It was there that she met and later happily married the love of her life, Patrick A. Izzo MD (Pat).

Maxine was a friendly and outgoing individual who always wore a smile and would always help anyone in need. She cherished spending time with her family, traveling, listening to music, and gardening. During her retirement years, she devoted her time to volunteering at The Penn State Health Hershey Medical Center, Hershey Ronald McDonald House, and The Children's Miracle Network. She was a participating member in the Linglestown Garden Club and loved having coffee on Monday mornings with her close friends known as the " DunDulas". She is survived by her loving daughter, Paula Cameron, and her husband Donald of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, along with her 4 grandsons, Patrick A Izzo III, Donald G. Cameron, D. Tucker Cameron, Andrew James Izzo, and 2 granddaughters, Sarah Elizabeth Izzo and Peri Ellen Moore. Maxine was predeceased by her husband, Patrick A Izzo, MD, and her devoted son, Patrick A Izzo, Jr.

JOANNE DEARCOPP

On May 10, 2024, Joanne Dearcopp (83) passed away in her sleep, at her home, in Old Greenwich, CT, where she had been a resident and involved community member for over 40 years.

Ms. Dearcopp was born on October 2, 1940, in Paterson, NJ, to Hilma Brandenburg Dearcopp and Walter Dearcopp, a New York City Police Department detective.

After earning her B.A. in psychology from Gettysburg College, she moved to New York and worked at the Sloan-Kettering Institute, the Animal Medical Center and then began her first stint in publishing at Simon & Schuster.

Her first entrepreneurial job was as a sports marketing agent. She was one of the first women allowed in the pits at the Indy 500 and at the Formula One race in Monte Carlo. She represented Janet Guthrie, the first woman driver at the Indy 500, and Lela Lombardi, the first woman to race Formula One. She also represented Olympic downhill gold medalist Barbara Ann Cochran, and the boxer Jackie Tonawanda, who dubbed herself the 'Female Ali'. She also photographed film stars Charles Bronson and Richard Burton on location.

In Joanne's own words, "Sports marketing was a lot of fun, but I finally decided to 'grow-up' and took a job as a marketing director for Nestle.' After several years in corporate life, she decided to "go out on my own again" as an independent marketing and strategic consultant, interior designer, movie car wrangler, and ultimately as an editor and publisher. Most notably she started her own publishing company in the early 2000's, Muse Ink Press, and was instrumental in publishing local writers, as well as the rediscovery of her client and close friend, author Sanora Babb. Ioanne was an avid traveler, sailor, and passionate collector of Native American and Chinese art and artifacts. She venerated ancient history and cultures, had a spiritual curiosity for the natural world, a very positive nature and a youthful enthusiasm for adventure. She was a founding member of the Bruce Museum, and an active member of Greenwich Pen Women. Joanne, known to her loved ones as "JoJo," was also a dedicated student of Zen Buddhism for 20 years, and was recently ordained in the traditional Jukai ceremony at the Zen Mountain Monastery in Mt. Tremper, NY, where she received the Dharma name Jishin (compassionate faith). JD, Jo, Jozie... Joanne was known by many nicknames to the lifelong friends she'd made in her various professional pursuits, many of them scattered throughout the world now, but all equally inspired by her interests and passions. Always in the market for "new and interesting adventures," Joanne also served as a Director of the Old Greenwich Yacht Club. Maybe "I am not really ever 'grown up yet!", she commented to fellow members.

A small local gathering to honor her memory will be hosted at Greenwich Point Park on Sunday, July 14 at 4 p.m.

Donations in honor of Joanne may be made to the Mt. Tremper Zen Mountain Monastery and Greenwich Pen Women.

MARY ROSE WHELAN

September 11, 1930 - May 8, 2024 Mary Rose Whelan (Pirrello) passed away on Wednesday, May 8, surrounded by family.

Mary was born and raised in Bridgeport, CT, in a large, loving, Italian family. She attended Central High School in Bridgeport, graduating highest in her class. After her graduation, she enrolled at the University of Bridgeport, where she met the love of her life, the late Richard M. Whelan.

Upon graduating summa cum laude and moving to Greenwich, Mary became a teacher at her alma mater, Central High School. Later in life she worked at the Greenwich High School Media Center, and as a caretaker for special needs children.

As a woman of deep faith, religion was a very important part of Mary's life. She was an active parishioner of Sacred Heart Church in Byram, as well as a member of the St. Catherine Players for 25 years, where she became well known for her gregarious singing and dancing. Outside of church, she enjoyed spending time at her much beloved Byram Shore, swimming and socializing with her friends. She was also an active member of the Byram Veterans Women's Auxiliary.

Above all Mary loved her family. Her 68-year marriage to Richard was filled with an enduring love, and many dances to Glen Miller's "In the Mood". She never missed a birthday, baptismal day, or any other celebration. Time spent with her family was what she most cherished. Mary had a way of bringing joy and life to everyone she met through her engaging and energetic personality and was sure to let them know that they were in her prayers. She is survived by her six children, Peggy of Dunedin, FL, Richard (Susan) of St. Augustine, FL, Patti (Bob) LePere of Cheshire, CT, Robert (Beth) of Wilmington, NY, Joe (Kristin) of Newtown, CT and Mary (John) Taylor of Mission Hills, KS. She is also survived by her grandchildren Paul, Joey, Kristopher, Jared, Ruby, Ethan, Mallory, Leah (Matt) Piros and her greatgranddaughter Quinn, as well as many beloved nieces and nephews. Visitation was on Monday, June 3 at Castiglione Funeral Home located, Greenwich. Funeral services were held on Tuesday, June 4, at Sacred Heart Church, Greenwich. Burial followed at St. Mary's Cemetery.

Al is survived by his daughter, Dana

Maxine was an active member of The Holy Name of Jesus Church in Harrisburg, PA, where she found solace and community.

Services will be private. In lieu of flowers, contributions can be made to UVM Foundation at the University of Vermont, Children's Miracle Network at Penn State Health Hershey, or Hershey Ronald McDonald House.

The Hoover Funeral Home in Linglestown, Pennsylvania, is assisting with the arrangements.

She is survived by her sister, Janet Dearcopp, a retired LPGA golf pro, residing in The Villages, Fla.

Girls Tennis Team Wins CIAC Class LL Tournament

By David Fierro

The 2023 season saw the Greenwich High School girls tennis team come extremely close to meeting its ultimate goal, on Thursday, the Cardinals achieved their main, season-long goal.

A highly impressive 4-0 win over 11th-seeded Staples in the championship match at Wilton High School gave top-seeded Greenwich the CIAC Class LL Tournament title, its first since the 2009 season.

With the state championship victory, Greenwich concluded its record of 21-1. The Cardinals have now won 11 state championships, the others coming in 2009, 2008, 2007, 2006, 1999, 1997, 1996, 1995, 1990 and 1989. In 2023, Greenwich earned a spot in the Class LL Tournament final, where it was edged by New Canaan, 4-2. In Thursday's Class LL title matchup, senior captain Kyra Dybas won the first set of her No. 1 singles match against her Staples opponent and was ahead, 4-1, in the second set, when the Cardinals picked up their fourth win and clinched the championship. Baseball's Greatest Rivalries

By Charlie Shapiro

At the May 29th meeting of the Retired Men's Association Spike Lipschutz introduced the day's speaker, Kelley Franco Throop, on "Getting Schooled in Baseball's Greatest Rivalries."

Kelley Franco is a baseball media entrepreneur, and her company is Three Inning Fan LLC. She hosts her own baseball podcast, "A Date in October with KFT." She has been a guest lecturer at the Baseball Hall of Fame and a baseball contributor on CNN's Financial Network. By day, Kelley is a practicing attorney in New Canaan, Connecticut at her firm, Franco and Associates.

Franco began by setting the stage for discussing rivalries, emphasizing how they add passion, excitement, and storytelling to baseball. She then dove into the "four main rivalries" she wanted to focus on. The first was the Brooklyn Dodgers and the New York Giants, which Franco called possibly "the rivalry with the greatest baseball moments." She traced the geographic and socioeconomic roots of the rivalry dating back to the late 1800s. The high point was the famous 1951 pennant race, culminating in Bobby Thomson's "Shot Heard 'Round the World" home run to win the pennant for the Giants.

The second main rivalry covered was the Yankees and Red Sox, labeled "the greatest rivalry in sports." Franco hit on several landmark moments, including Bucky Dent's home run in the 1978 playoff game, Aaron Boone's dramatic 2003 ALCS-winning homer, and the 2004 ALCS comeback by the Red Sox from a 3-0 series deficit to finally reverse the "Curse of the Bambino." The third peculiar rivalry discussed was between flamboyant Oakland A's owner Charlie Finley and baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn in the 1970s, stemming from Kuhn voiding Finley's attempted trades and sales of star players. The fourth main rivalry was the Cubs and Cardinals, driven by their geographic proximity and frequent regular season matchups over the decades, as well as shared players and managers like Bruce Sutter.

Franco then covered three "honorable mention" rivalries in Kelly Franco Throop entertained the audience with her insights into baseball's historic rivalries.

Greenwich Concours d'Elegance Triumpl

BY LIZ LEAMY

Last weekend was a golden one on all counts as hundreds of people convened at Roger Sherman Baldwin Park on the Long Island Sound to attend the much-anticipated 28th Greenwich Concours d'Elegance with its famous annual showcase of classic and contemporary American and European vehicles.

This renowned event, that is sponsored and organized by Hagerty, the automotive lifestyle brand and specialty collectible insurance company based in Traverse City, Michigan, and has been ranked by USA Today as a top-five car affair in the U.S., featured more than 300 stunning automobiles of all makes, styles and years, as well as an array of activities, including the Hagerty Ride and Drive experience and other memorable things, designating it as another unforgettable moment in time for its participants.

'We're thrilled with the quality of cars and the number of people that came. These events are what the car culture is all about and we're honored to be here," said McKeel Hagerty, Chief Executive Officer of Hagerty, who graciously thanked the Town of Greenwich for its vital role in this event. "The stars of this event, of course, are the cars and the owners who bring the cars."

This year's Greenwich Concours, in its celebrated signature style, drew scores of renowned automobile collectors and luminaries from all over the East Coast and the U.S., many of them coming from places as far as Montana, Idaho and Washington.

Concours top honors went to McMann as their automobiles Leigh Brent's breathtaking were named as the leading navy 1931 Cadillac 452A that victors of the 2024 Greenwich was named as the Concours d'Elegance Best of Show Award winner on Sunday and Tim it's my first time and it's been McMann's electric Barris-Built custom purple and ecru 1957 Chevrolet 210 'El Capitola' had been chosen as the Best of Show champion at the Concours de Washington, whose Barris-Sport event on Saturday.

Inventory Finally Above Last Year's Inventory

By Mark Pruner

Something really good happened the last week in May and is continuing in June. For the first time in a couple of years, the inventory of single family homes exceeded the inventory for that week in the prior year. At the end of May 2023, we had 164 listings. This year we had 168 listings. I hear you saying, "What's four more listings out of 168 listings? You are right it's a measly 2.4%, not the sort of thing that we generally get excited about, but that 168 listings is the cutting edge of rapid acceleration in then number of home listings that we have seen since the all-time record low of 88 listings at the beginning of 2024.

The other remarkable thing is that we don't normally see inventory reach YTD highs in June. Inventory generally comes on in March and April, goes to contract in April and May and the sales close in June and July. That's not likely to happen this year. I, and the rest of the Greenwich Streets Team have put on several listing recently and seen them go to multiple offer in days.

And we are certainly not the only Realtors seeing things go quickly. Of the 50 sales that we had in May 2024, the median days on market was 21 days. This means either a contingent contract went pending (noncontingent) in less than three weeks or the contract was an all-cash deal from when it was signed. Of the 25 sales that went non-contingent in 21 days or less only 7 of the contracts had a contingency.

Of those 7 contracts, only 4 actually probably had mortgage contingencies, as the other 3 went from cash.

Another thing we are seeing is the return of the inspection contingency in contracts, when the seller will allow it. Back when I was a full-time real estate attorney in '90s, most contracts had a mortgage contingency and an inspection contingency. Now the inspection is done before the contract is signed, so it is not legally a contingency, just the next step in pre-contract negotiations. By eliminating the inspection contingency, the seller keeps control of the deal and can accept a second offer from another buyer willing to pay more even as the first buyer is doing an inspection.

Nothing good every happens for a buyer between the time there is an accepted offer and a signed contract. I've heard of buyers with accepted offers taking a vacation and putting off the inspection for two weeks only to find that when they get back another buyer has not only done the inspection but has a signed contract. The rule in Greenwich is that there is no deal until the contract is signed. Most of the buyers who gazump, as the British say, the prior buyer with a second higher accepted offer do pay for the cost of the first buyer's inspection. (The interesting question is whether the disgruntled and dilatory first buyer will give their inspection to the gazumper who has reimbursed the first buyer.)

With more inventory comes more deals and our May 2024 sales matched our 50 sales in May 2023. This year's sales matched last year's sales with less inventory, so it was a remarkable month. It will be interesting to see what happens with sales in June and July. Our contracts give some indication of that with those also being on a steady upward rise. (OK, they fell last week, but it was Memorial Day week and even buyers and lawyers like to get away, once they have noncontingent contract. :) So, more inventory, more contracts and higher prices too, which looks promising. But that's what happens when you only have last year's calendar. Go back to pre-Covid times and our inventory is still down over 77%. At this time in 2019, we had 738 listings and buyers were the ones driving hard bargains. Also, while our inventory is over last year's inventory, our contracts have yet to exceed last year's

Our mortgage bankers have gotten much better at shortening the time from application to approval and our borrowers are learning to get underwritten pre-approved, so all they need is the contract and an appraisal to get approved, However, I've never seen a bank do it in 7 days. Which means that of the 25 sales that went for over list, the seller only agreed to a mortgage contingency in 4 contracts out of 25. If you want to buy a move-in ready house in Greenwich, bring

We only have 4.1 months of supply and that is below last year's 4.7 months of supply. That number is actually not that high for most of the market. Only over $6.5 million, do we see more than 6 months of supply. Over $10 million, we have a 20 months of supply, but throw in our 4 contracts over $10 million and months of supply drops by 3.5 months.

Under $5 million, our market averages a measly 2.8 months of supply, which is a super-seller's market. Some buyers may see inventory going up and say, I can a small fraction of a normal market. We may need a couple of years to get back to any semblance of a normal market. You are not going to see prices drop this year. Where we do have inventory, our sales are up slightly from last year. Sales over $1.5 million are slightly up from last year, as we have more inventory in 4 of the 7 price ranges over $1.5 million. At the same time, it's still combat buying below $1.5 million. Sales below $1.5 million are down sharply as limited inventory has limited sales. You can tell the lower inventory is what is leading to lower sales if you look at the even lower months of supply. We've got plenty of demand under $1.5 million, we just don't have much to sell. Under $1 million, you have a choice of 6 houses, with only one under $800K.

Another way to tell we have a tight market, that it will be staying tight is that our months of supply when you add in contracts (and based just on closed sale. In every price category, our MoS with contracts is lower, which is typical for this time of year, when contracts are increasing while inventory is falling, but this is not a typical year. Our June market has a very good chance of looking much more like an April market, as being the month when we get the most of our new inventory.

Another way to see how tight the market is is that in every price category, we have had more sales yearto-date than we presently have inventory. We are only 5 months into the year and sales are sucking up inventory, but as we saw, inventory is continuing to grow.

What we may be seeing is that we are past the bottom of the inventory drought and that people are once again starting to list their houses, as they move up to bigger houses and downsize to smaller houses and condos as they get older. That "normal" market won't be happening this year, but it's nice that interest rates don't play major role in our market. You can see this by the fact that houses under $1.5 million, where interest rates normally have the most impact, are in high demand. Also, a large segment of our market is downsizers, who have plenty of equity to spend on a new smaller house or condo. Most of these downsizers are not interested in taking on another mortgage payment regardless of how high or low the interest rates are. When the amount of a retiree's future annual income is uncertain, they are not looking for another monthly payment, especially when they have the equity to pay cash.

Stay tuned and we will see whether we are actually seeing movement back to a more normal real estate market ...

Mark Pruner is a principal on the Greenwich Streets Team at Compass Connecticut. He can be reached at 203-817-2871 or mark.pruner@compass. com.

In most price categories, we have had more sales to date than we presently have inventory, even though the two biggest sales months are coming up.

Low inventory under $1.5 million has meant very low sales where more people can afford houses.

is found throughout the contiguous United States. It spends the winter in warmer places from Florida to Mexico and migrates to our area in the springtime. Robins build a nest out of grass, twigs, and feathers, smeared with mud. They lay three to five eggs, two to three times every summer. Robins' eggs are a beautiful blue-green color.

PROMPT

Reproduce an excerpt from a letter or card postmarked April, 1968. (100-word limit.)

EXAMPLE

Dearest Margaret, My stint here at Berkeley will soon be drawing to a close, and I long to return to the shady streets, reliable social conventions, and sanity of my beloved Fairfield. I spent the better part of yesterday trying to instruct the students on the properties of certain polymers, but they were much more interested in wearing odd clothing and protesting the war against communism. Then I couldn't even retire to the club for my customary scotchand-soda because a phalanx of hippies got high on acid and were having a dance party on the highway. I am most discomfited...

Entries must be received by 11:59 p.m. Eastern Time on Thursday, June 13, 2024.

Winners will be announced in the June 21 issue of The Sentinel.

The Competition results are exclusively available to readers of the print or digital editions of The Greenwich and New Canaan Sentinels and are not available on our websites.

PROMPT What did I tell you in the parking lot at Mohegan Sun?

WINNER

Olivia Pointe

I told you that the neon lights and the cacophony of the casino masked a loneliness I couldn't shake. Amid the excitement, I confessed I felt more lost than ever.

RUNNER UP

Sabrina Emmer

I whispered to you that despite the chaos around us, the only thing I truly cared about was being with you — anywhere, including here and now, under the garish lights of Mohegan Sun.

HONORABLE MENTIONS

Zeena Hine

Wife to husband: OK, you go in and do your best at the craps tables. I'm taking the car to the outlet stores. We each have a budget of $250. Whoever ends up with less of our budgeted amount after our adventures this afternoon pays for dinner tonight. Good luck!

Astrology for Next Week

GEMINI

22 May-21 June It may seem as if you've been backed into a corner from which there is no escape but Geminis are nothing if not resourceful and by the weekend it will be you who is on the attack. However, you rivals won't give up their efforts to undermine you that easily, so be vigilant.

CANCER

22 June-23 July A friend or colleague will inspire you to aim higher and try harder. It may seem as if you've gone as far as you can with what you're working on but your viewpoint is limited, so listen to what they have to tell you, then act on it There is no limit to what you can do.

LEO

24 July-23 Aug The transit of Mars across the midheaven angle of your chart is an excellent omen of success. Even if you are not naturally forceful you'll push both yourself and those you work with to new heights. It won't end there: your career is well-starred until late July.

VIRGO

24 Aug-23 Sept You don't adapt easily to boredom and with energy planet Mars moving in your favour today you will do whatever it takes to get some zip back into your life. Others can play it safe if they wish but you're in need of excitement and won't rest until you find it.

SAGITTARIUS

23 Nov-21 Dec Don't worry if efforts to alter the working pattern of your life have met with only limited success as over the next six weeks you'll get opportunities galore to remold, if not remake, your everyday regime. Others will be impressed by your renewed dynamism.

CAPRICORN

22 Dec-20 Jan The Sun may be transiting one of the more sensitive areas of your chart but the entry of no-nonsense Mars into the most vibrant sector of the heavens will lift your spirits and keep them lifted for weeks to come. It's time to get serious about that dream you've been toying with.

AQUARIUS

21 Jan-19 Feb Someone you live or work with is in a bad mood. What can you do to put a smile back on their face? Not much, it seems, so perhaps the best you can aim for is to stay out of their way. If that proves impossible things might get emotional by the end of the week.

PISCES

20 Feb-20 March A minor confrontation could escalate into a major one, especially if you say something that does not go down well with those of a sensitive disposition. Not everyone is as forgiving as you and some of your barbs can be a bit painful. Think before you speak.

LIBRA

24 Sept-23 Oct Can you do without the good things in life? Probably not, in which case you'll need to find ways to make more money as there'll be plenty of good things tempting you in the days ahead. You won't have to deny yourself anything if you can find a new source of income.

SCORPIO

24 Oct-22 Nov The entry of Mars, planet of anger and aggression, into your opposite sign of Taurus will bring a partnership issue to a head and there may be a few harsh words. Just be careful you don't go too far and say things that cannot be taken back. It's a relationship, not a war.

ARIES

21 March-20 April You need to compartmentalise your mind, to put professional thoughts in one part and personal ones in another, and not let the two to mix. If you can do that this will be a happy and profitable week. If you can't, there will be chaos all round.

TAURUS

21 April-21 May Someone will try to burst your bubble but with energetic Mars entering your sign there is not much they can do to bring you down. You have so much confidence in what you're doing that even if the whole world seems against you it won't dent your self-belief.

COLUMN | WILDLY SUCCESSFUL: THE IVORY-BILLED WOODPECKER

A Zoological Legend That Was Thought Extinct

By Jim Knox

In September of 2021, after more than three quarters of a century of exhaustive field searches and hundreds of hopeful sightings reported, the Ivorybilled Woodpecker was officially declared extinct by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service. In July of 2022, based upon new evidence collected by field scientists from the U.S. National Aviary, the United States Fish and Wildlife Service overturned their extinction declaration to list the Ivory-billed Woodpecker as endangered. This extremely rare action speaks volumes about this remarkable creature and the hold it has over scientists and citizens alike. The Ivory-Billed Woodpecker (Campephilus principalis) is no ordinary bird. As one of the planet's largest woodpeckers, it was revered for its sheer size alone. Reaching 20 inches in length and boasting a 32-inch wingspan, it is an impressive creature by any measure. Yet, it was its size coupled with its striking appearance that evoked startled reactions and awe in those who beheld it. Known by many names including, "Ghost of the Bayou," "Grail Bird" and "Lord God Bird," the last quoted from observers of this magnificent animal up close, this animal entered the realm of zoological legend. With males boasting a black body, bold white striping along the neck back and wings, a tall flaming red crest, golden eye, and massive ivory bill, even a glimpse of this creature was unmistakable. With females displaying an all-black crest, they complement the male's arresting appearance with a distinct, stately image. As a creature which relies on vast bottomland and swamp forest tracts in which to hunt beetle larvae living in mature trees, the Ivory-bill suffered greatly from clear-
