

On traffic, the court determined that projected delays at nearby intersections did not amount to a demonstrated safety hazard. Regarding wetlands, the judge ruled that the commission improperly relied on the Inland Wetlands Commission's separate denial without independently weighing the evidence. He concluded that environmental concerns could be addressed through reasonable conditions.

Black History in New Canaan, Insights Today

The New Canaan Sentinel asked several members of Community Baptist Church for their views on:

1) What Black History Month means to them, and 2) What they would like to say about it fifty years in the future. This is what they said.

DALLAS RUFFIN

Black History Month is “knowing about your past history, of your people,” emphasizing all that Blacks have been through, and taking note of their knowledge and struggles to survive. And in fifty years? “I just want all people, all colors, just to be together.” He notes that God doesn’t care about anyone’s background or where they come from. He hopes for “No racists. This togetherness -- all in one.”

WILLIE BLUE

Mr. Blue was born on a plantation in the South in the 1940s, and said that “being born on a plantation was very, very difficult.” Despite that, he knew that “God was good, through all the trials and tribulations that I faced,” going on to note that Black history has shown him that the faith that he was taught and raised on has brought him to a point in life where he wants for nothing, there’s nothing he can’t do, and there’s “nothing that I regret from being Black.” He says that “Black history taught me that I can stand for what I really am: a child of the living God.” And in fifty years? Mr. Blue hopes things will be twice as good as they are today, “even though they are good.”

KIM BIANCA BURGESS

“Black History Month is a reminder of the opportunities that we have as Black Americans to continue to build upon the work and toil that our forefathers have done so that we can live in the freedoms and liberties that they fought for.” And in fifty years? “I would like to say that our youth now have recognized Black History Month as a point of pride and privilege, and taken every opportunity to maximize that instead of squander it.” She does not want them to “possibly relive the past being not necessarily enslaved in chains, but now enslaved in their thinking, enslaved in their finances, enslaved in their relationships.” She hopes they will use “life’s lessons as a platform for growth and stability.”

JOANN EASON

Black History Month means “my inheritance, where I come from and actually where we are going to.” She went on to note that “there’ve been some changes, but there’s a whole lot more I would love to see.” And in fifty years? “That we will be welcome.” She concluded by saying that Blacks have come “a long way, yes, Okay. There’s more to do.”

REV. GILBERT BURGESS

“Unity has always been a part of me growing up -- is something that my parents instilled. And my attitude with our society today is that we are all one people, no matter how we look at it. And when we come around to this time of the year, I still question why do we have to have a Black History Month? Why can’t we just be level and enjoy one another? But understanding that there are different cultures and they want to celebrate. I understand. But for African-Americans, for me, I have a different perspective of it. Juneteenth, even, it’s a time of also remembering those days of slavery. And it almost to some extent is in my face as a reminder. Not the positive, but what once was that was not peaceful, not pleasant. And it still makes a lot of us uncomfortable. So when Black History Month rolls around...There are those who, my age, a little older, who had lived through some of the traumas and remembering that. For instance, today I mentioned Tulsa [in my sermon], something I could not ever imagine happening, but did happen. And to have to grapple with that. Even today, we’re finding ourselves kind of challenged with the division. It does make you kind of uncomfortable.” And in fifty years? “There is a generation of people who have really, and I say this from a slang perspective, done with racism, they had enough of it. We’ve got interracial marriages across the globe, and I don’t see any of them saying ‘Okay, we’re going to have to split up.’ And there are people who are just in love with living with one another and enjoying life while there is a group of us who are still trying to go backwards. So what I would hope for or look for is that there will be a significant shift in this whole prejudice business. We may never be able to alleviate, get rid of, it completely, but at least there’ll be more people striving and living together as one people as opposed to the left and the right. So that’s what I would hope to see.”

Black History in New Canaan, Then & Now

By JOHN KRIZ

February is Black History Month, declared in the Bicentennial year 1976 by former President Gerald Ford. Its precursor was Negro History Week, the idea of historian Carter G. Woodson and the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, in 1926; it was celebrated during the second week of February, to coincide with the birthdays of Abraham Lincoln and Frederick Douglass.

Black people have consistently lived in New Canaan since colonial times, though never in large numbers. According to mid-2025 U.S. Census estimates, Blacks comprised 1.7% of the town’s population.

From Colonial Times

According to documents and research from an exhibition at the New Canaan Museum & Historical Society entitled “Forces of Change: Enslaved and Free Blacks in New Canaan,” in 1776 Connecticut had more than 5,000 people in bondage, the most in any New England colony.

(Editor’s Note: The bulk of the information in this section has been taken from this exhibition, which was researched and produced by the New Canaan Museum & Historical Society <https://nchistory.org> in 2019 with a grant from the New Canaan Community Foundation.)

In 1784, ‘An Act to Prevent the Slave Trade,’ prevented residents from importing or transporting any inhabitants of Africa as slaves or servants for a term of years. It also stated that “No negro or mulatto born in Connecticut after March 1 is to be held as a slave after reaching the age of 25.”

The 1790 census noted that Samuel Cooke Silliman, son of Rev. Robert Silliman, owned a woman named Phyllis. Mr. Silliman died in 1795, and left his estate to his wife except for Phyllis, whom he emancipated. A month prior to his death, Phyllis gave birth to a son, Harry, who was listed as a ‘mulatto male child’. Phyllis died in the town’s almshouse at age 101. Later records indicate that Mr. Silliman’s widow purchased a ‘malato boy Harry’, turning him over to her brother.

A 1792 Connecticut law allowed slave owners to emancipate their slaves provided those persons were deemed to be in good health, and between the ages of 25 and 45 – dropping to 21 a few years later.

In 1800 Connecticut still had slaves among its population, though it had fallen to 931. The number of free Blacks had risen to 5,300. Many slaves had been emancipated by enlisting in the military during the Revolutionary War.

When New Canaan was incorporated as a town in 1801 the population of 1,500 included 8 slaves.

In 1818, the Connecticut Constitution was amended to exclude Blacks from voting.

Records from 1790 to 1830 listed numerous New Canaan families as slaveowners, including such prominent surnames as Benedict, Carter, Comstock, Fitch, Hanford, Husted, Richards, St. John, Seely, Silliman and Weed – many now found in street names.

Connecticut enacted the ‘Black

Law’ in 1833, which prohibited anyone from educating Blacks without authorization by a town’s government. This was in response to Prudence Crandall’s school for Black women in the town of Canterbury.

The Connecticut Anti-Slavery Society was founded in 1838.

Connecticut abolished slavery in 1848.

The U.S. Supreme Court’s 1857 Dred Scott decision ruled that Blacks could not be citizens, and that Congress had no authority to prohibit slavery in the territories.

Onesimus Comstock, born to his enslaved mother Candace in 1763, in the household of Capt. Jonathan Husted, was sold at age ten to Sarah and Phoebe Comstock. In the 1850 census, Onesimus listed himself as a ‘voluntary slave.’ He died in 1857, and is buried in the Upper Canoe Hill Cemetery.

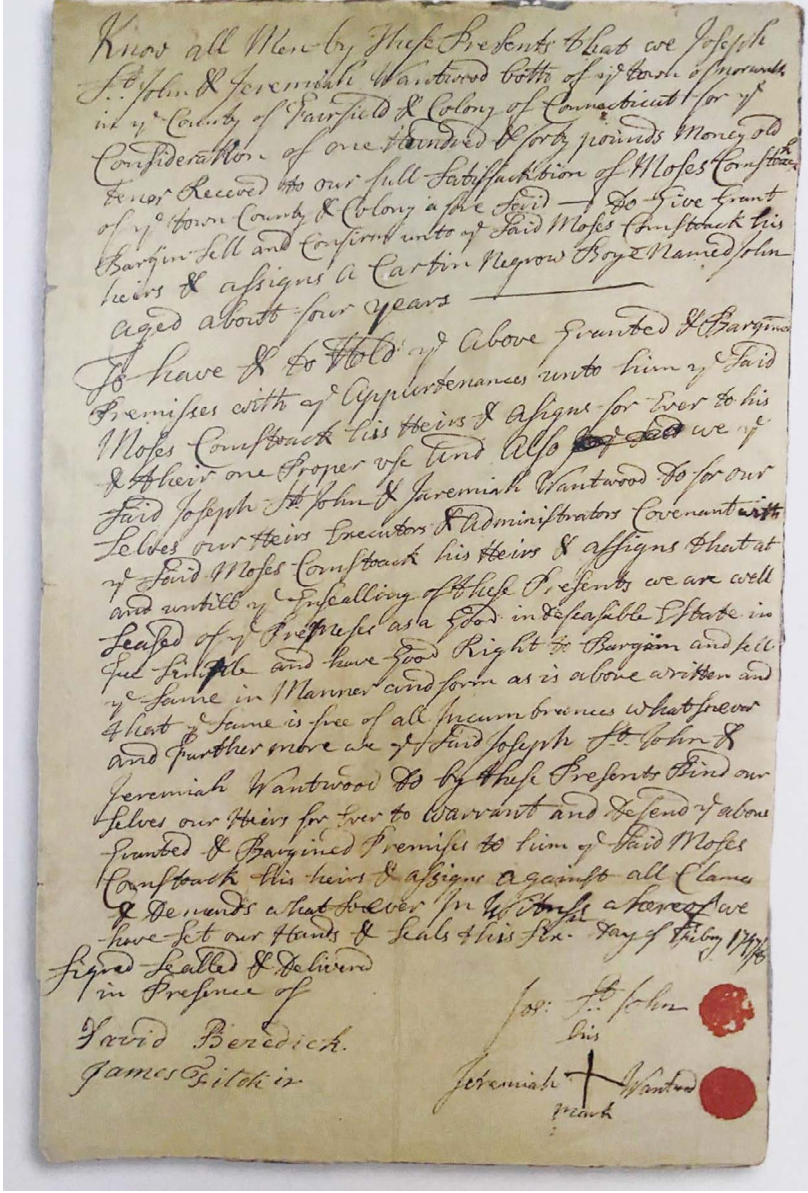

Miss Dinah Richards owned an estate on Smith Ridge Road, as well as slaves, one of whom was Grace. When Grace married, Miss Richards built a house for the couple on Laurel Road. Grace served as Miss Richards’ personal attendant and was a parishioner at St. Mark’s Episcopal Church, where she helped serve the noon meal. She is buried in the Canoe Hill Burying Ground along with Miss Richards and many of Miss Richards’ family members. Grace’s headstone says: Grace, wife of Benjamin Smith, born in Congo, Lower Guinea, Africa. Died in New Canaan, Conn., June 18th, 1875. Aged about 80 years.

Census data from 1850 state that there were 22 Black people in New Canaan, rising to 37 by 1880.

Nancy Thatcher, a Black girl, was raised by Nathan and Mary Hanford, who were childless. She eventually married and had two children, with Mr. Hanford giving her seven acres of land on the Five Mile River. Mr. Hanford subsequently gave her the Hanford Homestead, including 68 additional acres. Her husband died and she remarried, giving birth to two more children. She died in 1881, age 56, leaving a substantial estate. She is buried in Upper Canoe Hill Cemetery.

facto bank and realtor, buying a dozen homes on East Avenue and Cherry Street in 1941, first renting the homes to Black families, and then selling the homes to them. Most of these Black families owned small businesses. Working with the now-104-year-old Community Baptist Church on Cherry Street, a historically Black church, and other groups, she helped these small businesses to become more integral parts of the local business community, and for the families’ children to be enrolled in the town’s public schools.

Beatrice Jeffress and her husband came to New Canaan in the late 1940s. She was the first Black person to serve in the New Canaan Police Department, first as a crossing guard and subsequently as supervisor for female prisoners. Their son Robert became a teacher and guidance counselor in New Canaan High School. He has been an active member of the Community Baptist Church for many years, including service as a church trustee.

Lucius Griggs founded New Canaan’s branch of the NAACP in 1944. He was also a member of Community Baptist Church, and served on the town’s Zoning Board of Appeals and Planning and Zoning Commission. By 1975 the branch had 650 members, making it the largest in Connecticut. Over time those numbers fell, and the NAACP branch has become inactive.

In the early 1960s New Canaan had around 350 Black residents.

The ‘New Canaan Experiment’ of 1969 to 1977 entailed bringing student teachers from Virginia’s historically Black Norfolk State College to town to teach in the public schools. The idea was to promote understanding and produce teachers who could cross cultural lines, and this soon after the assassinations of Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. The student teachers lived with host families. Eighty student teachers participated during the program’s successful eight-year run.

In 1972, a minister at the Congregational Church, and local leaders including the First Selectman and public school officials, raised funds to establish the ‘A Better Chance’ (ABC) program, buying a house on Locust Avenue. The program’s goal is to provide transformative academic opportunities to talented young men from disadvantaged backgrounds – first focusing on young Black men, and expanding to include those from all racial and ethnic backgrounds. Starting with the 1974-1975 academic year, the ABC Program has graduated many dozens of scholars, all of whom have gone on to college.

Joseph Polisi to Trace Lincoln Center’s History at New Canaan Men’s Club

Joseph Polisi, president emeritus of The Juilliard School, will recount the history of Lincoln Center at Friday’s meeting of the New Canaan Men’s Club, with remarks focusing on the performing arts complex’s role in New York cultural life and Juilliard’s standing as an incubator of talent across the disciplines.

The Men’s Club will meet at 10 a.m. in Morrill Hall at St. Mark’s Episcopal Church, 111 Oenoke Ridge. Dr. Polisi’s presentation will begin around 10:40 a.m., following the business portion of the meeting. He will share perspectives drawn from his leadership of Juilliard and from his work examining Lincoln Center’s origins and development.

President Emeritus Joseph W. Polisi led The Juilliard School for thirty-four years, from 1984 to 2018, the longest presidential term in the school’s history. Upon stepping down in June 2018, he became Juilliard’s Chief China Officer, supervising the development of The Tianjin Juilliard School, a new campus in Tianjin, China. The Tianjin school offers selective, audition-based programs at the pre-college and graduate levels. The graduate program is taught in English and confers a U.S.-accredited master’s degree from The Juilliard School in New York. The campus also includes public programs for adult learning and instrumental training, along with Juilliard Imagination, an interactive exhibition environment curated for adults and children.

Dr. Polisi is the author of “Beacon to the World: A History of Lincoln Center,” which describes how the project was conceived in the belief that “Americans would benefit from bringing together a diverse array of performing organizations.” The book notes that John D. Rockefeller 3rd marshalled support from leaders representing political and civic interests, major financial institutions, and the performing arts. Rockefeller viewed the creation of Lincoln Center “as part of his responsibilities as a citizen of New York,” recognizing the arts’ role in the lives of New Yorkers. Today, the book argues, Lincoln Center stands on Manhattan’s West Side as a cultural anchor underpinning the “quest for excellence in the demanding profession of the performing arts.”

Born in New York City, Dr. Polisi is also an accomplished bassoonist who has performed as a soloist, chamber musician, and orchestral player throughout the United States and in major New York City venues. He has written scholarly and educational articles for professional journals, produced sound recordings with an emphasis on contemporary American music, and recorded a solo album of twentieth-century bassoon works for Crystal Records.

Americans would benefit from bringing together a diverse array of performing organizations.

He is the author of two additional books published by Amadeus Press: “The Artist as Citizen” (2005), a collection of speeches and articles on the role of performing artists as leaders and communicators of human values, and “American Muse: The Life and Times of William Schuman” (2008), a full-length biography of the composer and arts administrator. A revised edition of “The Artist as Citizen” was published in 2016, and Beijing Normal University Press released a Chinese-language edition, titled “The Artist as Leader,” in China.

Before coming to Juilliard, Dr. Polisi served as dean of the University of Cincinnati College-Conservatory of Music, dean of faculty at the Manhattan School of Music, and executive officer of the Yale University School of Music. He holds a Doctor of Musical Arts degree from Yale University, a degree in political science from the University of Connecticut, and a degree in international relations from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University.

Aside from hosting guest speakers on a variety of topics, Men’s Club members participate in regularly scheduled activities including hiking, yoga, and squash, and join discussions through its book and cinema clubs. Many members are also involved in New Canaan civic activities. The Men’s Club has openings for new members, men age 55 and above. For information about joining, email ncmens@ncmens.org

A New Year, A Fresh Start

Lent arrived this week. So did the Lunar New Year, which began February 17 with the Year of the Fire Horse. Two calendars, two traditions, both pointing in the same direction: pause, take stock, consider what matters, and begin again with clearer intentions.

New Canaan is not a town that lacks energy. It is full of capable people, strong institutions, and an unusual level of civic participation. Residents show up. They care deeply. They argue their points. They volunteer. They serve. That is part of what makes this community what it is.

Weeks like this one invite a certain kind of reflection about how that energy is used.

The Year of the Fire Horse is often associated with drive and independence. Those can be virtues in a town that values initiative. But civic life, like family life, is rarely improved by sheer force of will. Progress tends to come through steadiness, patience, and the ability to work with people who do not always see things the same way.

Lent offers a similar lesson. It is not a season of grand declarations. It is quieter than that. It asks for self-examination, restraint, and seriousness about the long term. It reminds us that renewal is usually less about dramatic gestures and more about daily choices.

New Canaan has a great deal in front of it this year. The town continues to grapple with the practical work of maintaining excellence—schools, public spaces, infrastructure, safety, planning. These are not glamorous responsibilities, but they are the work of a remarkably joyful and serious community.

And New Canaan is, at its best, a joyful and serious community.

One of the more striking things about local government is how much depends on people simply doing their jobs well—committee members reading the materials, professionals bringing expertise, elected officials listening carefully, residents offering criticism that is constructive. That happens here more often than not, projects move forward, costs are managed, and trust grows.

Everyone in town has seen moments when disagreements become less about substance and more about posture. When the goal shifts from improving a plan to stopping it. That is not the norm however.

The good news is that New Canaan has always been its combination of high standards and deep roots. People here expect things to be done well. They also understand, even when frustrated, that the work belongs to all of us.

This week, with Lent beginning and the Lunar New Year arriving, is a useful reminder that renewal is built into the rhythm of life. There is always another chance to reset—to approach civic debates with a little more humility, to disagree without derailing, to bring the temperature down and the joy up.

New Canaan is a wonderful place, not because it is perfect, but because people keep investing in it: raising families, supporting schools, protecting traditions, and planning carefully for what comes next.

The Year of the Fire Horse will bring its own momentum. Lent will bring its own quiet discipline. Together, they offer a timely invitation: to move into the months ahead with steady purpose, even more grace, and a shared commitment to the town we all love.

Happy Lunar New Year.

Town of New Canaan Announces Change to Kiwanis Pond Water Treatment

The Town of New Canaan announces that beginning this summer, Kiwanis Pond will no longer be treated with chlorine. While chlorination will cease, the Town remains fully committed to protecting public health and ensuring the safety of bathing water for all residents.

To that end, the Town will continue to conduct weekly water quality testing throughout the swimming season. These test results are used to assess water quality and, when necessary, have resulted in temporary closures of Kiwanis Pond. In addition, the Town will implement a supplemental water quality study this summer to further evaluate pond conditions following significant rainfall events.

Water samples will be collected whenever more than one-half inch (½”) of rainfall occurs within a 24-hour period, with testing conducted Monday through Friday. If test results exceed the safe bathing criteria established by the Connecticut Department of Public Health, Kiwanis Pond will be closed until satisfactory results are obtained. Any closures will be communicated to the public through the Town’s website and social media channels.

“At every step, our priority is public health and safety,” said Amy Lehaney, Director of Health for the Town of New Canaan. “By continuing routine testing and expanding monitoring after significant rain events, we are ensuring that decisions about pond use are guided by data and sound public health practices.”

“Kiwanis Pond has long been a cherished summer destination for families in New Canaan,” said John Howe, Director of Parks and Recreation. “These changes allow us to continue offering a clean, natural, and enjoyable swimming experience while maintaining the high standards of safety and care our residents expect.”

At the conclusion of the summer season, the Town will evaluate the data collected to establish clear, rainfall-based criteria that may be used in the future to temporarily close the pond following heavy rain events, if necessary, to protect public health.

Kiwanis Pond has been in use for many years and is continuously replenished by an onsite well. Each spring, the pond is drained, the bottom is cleaned, and the sand is replenished. In addition, the Town utilizes a geese management company to help reduce potential water contamination. The constant inflow of fresh water promotes circulation, while these combined measures help prevent stagnation and support overall water quality.

The Town of New Canaan remains committed to providing safe and enjoyable recreational amenities while thoughtfully using data-driven practices to guide operational decisions.

BARBARA MCLEOD

Barbara D. McLeod, the youngest of nine children and the loving mother of seven, grandmother of twenty and great-grandmother of twenty-one, died on February 15, 2026, in New Canaan, at the age of 96.

Barbara was born on April 28, 1929, in her home in Fairfield. She was the youngest of nine children born to Jozef and Maria Pekar, who had emigrated to the U.S. from eastern Slovakia. Barbara was raised by her mother, as her father died three weeks before she was born. She was editor-in-chief of the student newspaper and the top student in the academic group of Roger Ludlowe High School class of 1947. She was one of the first University Scholars at the University of Connecticut, where she graduated in 1952. Barbara married Robert L. McLeod of Shelton on August 28, 1954. FISINA TOMASELLI

Fisina Malizia Tomaselli
(June 18,1931 - Feb. 8, 2026)

Fisina Tomaselli, a devoted daughter of the Roman Catholic faith and unwavering pillar of her family, peacefully entered eternal life on Feb. 8, 2026, her heart filled with the love of Christ and cherished memories of those she held dear.

Fiz, as she was known, was born in New Canaan, attended New Canaan schools and was a 1949 graduate of New Canaan High School. While at New Canaan High School she played varsity sports and was captain of the girls’ basketball team (she was not the center).

Her dedication to St. Aloysius Church in New Canaan was one of great love and commitment to the parish. She was deeply involved in parish life from her youth to her adulthood. She served as the volunteer bookkeeper for decades. She served on the financial committee and various boards (too numerous to mention) and was a room mother for each of her five children at the St. A’s School. She was the first woman to serve on the Parish Council Board. She was a member of the Catholic Daughters of America since 1953. Her faith included daily worship at the 7am Mass and her life was centered around St. Aloysius and its ministries.

Beyond the church, Fiz’s commitment to the New Canaan community was extraordinary. In 1972, she “adopted” the New Canaan High School Hockey Team, hosting lasagna and pizza dinners for years for the players, coaches and managers. Along with her husband, Larry, she founded the annual New Canaan High School Alumni Ice Hockey Game, which became a major fundraiser for JV Hockey Program. She also served on the Parent Faculty Board of NCHS and the Sports Council Board, as well as the Hall of Fame Committee. She was inducted into the NCHS Hall of Fame in 2000. She volunteered in the Guidance Department and the Athletic Department.

Her other volunteering included serving on the New Canaan Library Board, the New Canaan Historical Society, and the Schoolhouse Apartment Board. From its inception, Fiz also volunteered at the Waveny Care Center every Tuesday morning, taking on a variety of responsibilities.

Fiz had a love for reading and vacationing at her beloved Cape Cod and watching sports with a particular interest in ice hockey and the New York Yankees.

Her name carried a story close to her heart. Her mother, Antonia, wished to name her Norina, while her father, Dominic, wanted to honor his mother, Crocifissa. By combining “Fis” from Crocifissa and “Ina” from Norina, they created the name Fisina.

Family meant everything to Fiz. She worked hand in hand with her husband, Larry, in running their successful accounting business. She delighted in being surrounded by loved ones and especially cherished hosting holiday celebrations and family reunions.

Fisina was predeceased by her husband, Lawrence Tomaselli, and her eldest son, Lawrence Anthony Tomaselli. She was also predeceased by her sister, Marie DiBarnaba, and her brother, Tony Malizia. Her surviving siblings are Violet Ruscoe and Josephine Krone (Al). She is survived by her children: Laura (Kent) Siladi, James (Sandra)Tomaselli, Maria Tomaselli,Matt Tomaselli and daughter-in-law Anne Tomaselli. She is also survived by six grandchildren: Susan, Laura and Michelle, MaryAnn and Katrina and James. She is also survived by 8 great-grandchildren.

Calling hours will be held at Hoyt Funeral Home, 199 Main St., New Canaan, on March 6, 2026, from 4:00 pm to 6:30 pm. A Memorial Mass will be held on March 7, 11:00 am at St. Aloysius Church, 21 Cherry Street, New Canaan. In lieu of flowers, memorial gifts in her name can be made to St. Aloysius Church for its youth ministry and Waveny Care Center.

GLORIA MURPHY

Gloria Patricia Murphy, nee Bard, age 94, passed away at her home in Seminole, Florida, on February 5, 2026. Gloria was born on June 30th, 1931, in Brooklyn, New York, to Charles Edward Bard and Irene Pauline Charette. She lived her early life in Norwalk, CT, attended school there, and was a member of the National Honor Society at Norwalk High School.

Gloria married Paul James Murphy on October 14, 1950. They celebrated 70 years of marriage together before Paul’s death in 2021. Gloria raised eight children at their home in New Canaan. She is survived by her daughters, Mary McNeel, Paula Kilkenny, Frances Argay and Margaret Murphy; by her sons, Kevin, Christopher and Timothy Murphy; as well as grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She was predeceased by her son, Patrick.

Gloria was a loving wife, mother and grandmother, and will be missed dearly. She and Paul traveled extensively throughout their life together and some of their favorite places were New Zealand, Hawaii, Turkey, Croatia and Ireland. They attended church at St. Aloysius in New Canaan, and later at St. Jerome in Largo, Florida.

She was an avid swimmer and loved the ocean. Gloria and Paul spent many happy days at their beach cottage in Charlestown, Rhode Island and, later, in Florida, where they retired to. Her passions included antiques, oil and watercolor painting, quilting, needlepoint and hooked rugs. She was quite creative and very skilled in all of these hobbies, as well as being a keen tennis player. She also had a love of gardening and was particularly interested in orchid growing.

A Funeral Mass will be held in late Spring to early summer. More details to follow.

Women's Conference

Whether you come seeking renewal, clarity, rest, or inspiration, this day promises meaningful conversations, beautiful spaces.

Christ Church will host its annual women's conference on Saturday, April 18, 2026, bringing New York Times bestselling author and Duke Divinity School professor Kate Bowler to speak on faith, suffering and joy before an anticipated audience of more than 300 women.

The conference, titled “Your Awakened Life,” runs from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at Christ Church Greenwich, 254 East Putnam Ave. Organizers say tickets are now on sale and include Bowler's newest book, Joyful Anyway, along with breakfast, lunch and three workshops selected by participants.

Early Bird tickets are priced at $110 through Feb. 18 and increase to $125 after that date. The event has sold out in each of the past three years, according to organizers.

Bowler, an associate professor of American religious history at Duke Divinity School, first gained national attention for her memoir Everything Happens for a Reason (And Other Lies I've Loved), written after her Stage IV cancer diagnosis. The book examined popular Christian narratives about success and suffering through the lens of her own illness.

She now hosts the podcast “Everything Happens,” where she speaks with guests about navigating difficult questions of faith and meaning. Organizers describe her work as exploring “faith, suffering, joy, and the truths of human life with intelligence, honesty, and humor.” Bowler has more than 400,000 followers across her platforms in the faith and spirituality space.

At the April conference, Bowler will speak about Joyful Anyway, her latest book. The day will begin with breakfast followed by her keynote address. The Rt. Rev. Laura

Last Year's Women's Conference gathered 300 women for a remarkably empowering event at Christ Church.

Ahrens, Bishop Suffragan of the Episcopal Church in Connecticut, will offer the opening prayer and remarks.

The conference is organized by the Women of Christ Church Greenwich and is structured to allow flexibility. After the keynote, attendees will select three seminar sessions from a slate of offerings covering theology, psychology, finance and contemplative practice.

Workshop topics include “The God Circuit: What the Brain Reveals About Prayer, Presence & Walking on Eggshells: How to Stay Sane

When Dealing with Fragile Narcissists,” led by psychologist Dr. Betsy Holmberg. Elizabeth Schrader Polczer, Ph.D., will present “Mary Magdalene in the Gospel of John: A Case of Textual Suppression? & Who was Mary Magdalene?”

Financial independence will be addressed in “Awakening to Your Financial Independence: Taking Control of Your Financial Future,” led by Julie Jason, JD, LL.M. Iris Eplan, LMSW, will guide “Resonance: A Sound Bath Journey to Inner Stillness.” Additional sessions include “Unplugged & Present: Reclaiming Your Attention in a Distracted World,” led by Julianne Furniss-Green, LCSW; “Bloom Where You're Planted: Creating Beauty from What's Before You,” with Eugenie Pavlic and Pam Reimers; “Awakened Living: Strengthening the Heart & Renewing Our Strength,” led by Melissa Murphy, MA, CMHC, LPC; and “Finding Your Center: Techniques in Meditation and Prayer,” led by Elizabeth Fitts, Ph.D.

Organizers describe the gathering as “an immersive learning experience with women, by women, and for women.” Promotional materials add: “Whether you come seeking renewal, clarity, rest, or inspiration, this day promises meaningful conversations, beautiful spaces, and the freedom to explore faith and life with honesty and hope.”

The event reflects a broader pattern of women's conferences within mainline Protestant congregations that blend theological reflection with practical concerns about mental health, financial literacy and spiritual formation. By combining academic scholarship, pastoral leadership and applied workshops, the conference aims to address both personal faith and daily life.

Questions about the event may be directed to womensconference@christchurchgreenwich.org

Tickets are available while supplies last. Organizers say they anticipate strong demand again this year.

A Festive, Healthy Feast for the Season

Lent and the Lunar New Year rarely arrive in the same week, but when they do, they offer New Canaan a quietly appealing invitation: celebrate, yes, but do so with restraint, gratitude, and intention.

The Lunar New Year, which began February 17 with the Year of the Fire Horse, is traditionally a time for family meals, symbolic dishes, and a spirit of renewal. Lent, by contrast, asks for simplicity, reflection, and a focus on what lasts beyond the immediate moment. Together, they create an unusual but fitting pairing — a reminder that festivity does not require excess, and that some of the best celebrations are the ones that feel grounded.

Simple Steamed Fish Fillets with Ginger and Scallions

Fish is one of the most traditional Lunar New Year dishes, symbolizing abundance.

- Serves: 4
- Time: 20 minutes
- Ingredients
 - 1½ pounds white fish fillets (cod, halibut, or tilapia)
 - 2 tablespoons low-sodium soy sauce
 - 1 tablespoon rice vinegar
 - 1 teaspoon sesame oil
 - 1 tablespoon fresh ginger, thinly sliced
 - 3 scallions, thinly sliced
- Optional: sesame seeds or cilantro for garnish
- Instructions
 - Place fish fillets on a heatproof plate.
 - Scatter ginger and scallions over the top.
 - Set the plate in a steamer basket over simmering water.
 - Cover and steam 8–10 minutes, until fish flakes easily.
 - Mix soy sauce, vinegar, and sesame oil.
 - Pour sauce over the fish just before serving.
 - Garnish lightly and serve with rice or greens.

Quick Garlic Bok Choy

For households observing Lent, the question often becomes practical: can you host a meaningful Lunar New Year meal without abandoning the season’s disciplines? The answer is yes. A table can be festive without being heavy. It can honor tradition without indulgence. It can feel special while still remaining healthy, simple, and appropriate for a meatless Friday or a Lenten week.

The culinary traditions of the Lunar New Year lend themselves naturally to this balance. Fish, for example, is one of the most common New Year’s dishes, served as a symbol of abundance. Steamed preparations are light, elegant, and well suited to Lent. Greens such as spinach

- Greens represent renewal and health.
- Time: 10 minutes
- Ingredients
 - 1 pound bok choy (or spinach)
 - 1 tablespoon sesame oil or olive oil
 - 2 cloves garlic, minced
 - 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- Instructions
 - Heat oil in a skillet.
 - Add garlic and cook 30 seconds.
 - Add bok choy and stir until wilted and tender-crisp.
- Splash with soy sauce and serve immediately.

Longevity Noodles (Simple Version)

- Noodles are served for long life and continuity.
- Time: 15 minutes
- Ingredients
 - 8 ounces rice noodles or spaghetti
 - 1 tablespoon sesame oil
 - 1 cup shredded carrots
 - 1 cup snow peas or broccoli
 - 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- Instructions
 - Cook noodles according to package directions.

and bok choy represent vitality and renewal, and tofu provides a satisfying centerpiece without breaking dietary rules.

The goal is not to recreate a banquet, but to create a meal that feels thoughtful: clean flavors, bright ingredients, and dishes meant to be shared. A Lunar New Year table, after all, is about togetherness as much as taste.

Below is a simple, healthy, Lenten-friendly menu that works beautifully for a New Canaan home celebration — a meal that respects both the season of reflection and the joy of a new year.

- Heat sesame oil in a pan.
- Add vegetables and stir-fry 3–4 minutes.
- Toss in noodles and soy sauce.
- Serve warm.

Dessert: Mandarin Oranges and Honey

- The simplest Lunar New Year sweet is often fruit. Mandarin oranges symbolize good fortune.
- Ingredients
 - Mandarin oranges, peeled
 - 1 teaspoon honey (optional)
- Sprinkle of sesame seeds (optional)
- Instructions
 - Arrange oranges on a plate.
 - Drizzle lightly with honey if desired.
- Serve fresh.

- A Meal That Fits the Week
 - This is the kind of dinner that honors both seasons: the joy of a new year and the restraint of Lent. Simple fish, bright greens, warm noodles, and fruit for sweetness — a table that feels celebratory without excess.
 - Happy Lunar New Year, and a peaceful Lenten season.

By Scott Herr

This coming Sunday, February 22nd, is the first Sunday of Lent, the season which began on Ash Wednesday and ends on Holy Saturday before Easter. It’s a forty-day season patterned on the “temptations of Christ” recorded in both Matthew 4 and Luke 4 where Jesus is led by the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted by the Devil for forty days. Traditionally, Lent is a penitential period and many sanctuaries are adorned with the color purple. Thankfully, Sundays even in Lent, are considered “mini-Easters” and so not “fast” days!

Lent is the “Holy Spring” of the Church. It’s a time for renewal and refreshment. It’s a time for new life. The English word Lent comes from the Old English word “lencten,” which means “lengthening” and reminds us of the lengthening of days that is part of nature’s Spring. Lent is fundamentally a time not only to prepare for, but to experience Easter new life. Many Christians have inherited the tradition that Lent is a time to “give up something.” The early monastic communities would take this time to fast and “give up” their food so they could be more generous in giving alms to the poor.

Lent is not a time to simply deprive yourself of something so that you feel miserable, as though that has anything to do with healthy spirituality. No, if we give up something, it is to create space for God; for God to do something new in and/or through us. In other words, when we “give up” something for Lent, it should be accompanied with eager anticipation for God to give us something new and even more precious or fulfilling! Typical spiritual disciplines of Lent are increased prayer, scripture reading, fasting and serving the poor. We do this not merely out of a sense of duty, but to rediscover our First Love, and the gift of creating space for God in our crowded lives to cultivate deeper relationship and collaboration with our Creator and Friend.

For Lent this year, I will be inviting our congregation to reflect on, in addition to the lectionary texts, a different question for each of the five Sundays leading up to Holy Week. The questions come from my journey along “The Camino Santiago,” the 500-mile pilgrimage in Northern Spain I enjoyed back in 2017. They are questions which I find helpful in rediscovering the Way of Jesus, and to finding our way to new life which I believe is the point of the Lenten season. The five questions are:

- 1)“Does it give life, or take life away?”
- 2)“Does it expand your world, or shrink it?”
- 3)“Does it lead you more deeply into mystery and paradox, or black and white reality?”
- 4)“Does it set you free to give yourself away to something bigger than yourself, or enslave you to the fear of ‘not enough’?”

5)“Does it bring you and others joy, or despair?”

Perhaps you might find these questions helpful in discerning the way forward on your life journey? It’s interesting to me that the temptations of Jesus helped clarify who he was in relation to God, and prepared him for his public ministry to others. I pray you will find Lent to be not just a time to give something up, but a time to receive something new from the God who loves you, and calls you forward to Easter new life!

How Did He Get the Shot? The Photography of Neil Vigdor

By Arnold Gordon

Neil Vigdor has built a career at the intersection of speed and precision, covering some of the most consequential political and breaking news events of the past decade while sustaining a parallel life behind the camera.

A reporter for The New York Times, Vigdor focuses on breaking news with an emphasis on politics. He was part of the Times political team covering the 2024 presidential election and the 2022 midterms, reporting from every battleground state during the last election cycle, as well as from Iowa and New Hampshire. His work included tracking voting legislation and monitoring threats against election officials, assignments that required constant travel and rapid response.

Before joining the political team, Vigdor covered a wide range of national breaking news stories. His reporting has included the police killing of George Floyd, the January 6 attack on the U.S. Capitol, several mass shootings, pandemic-related developments and four national conventions and two presidential inaugurations. The scope of his assignments has also extended to crime, business and pop culture.

A graduate of Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee, Vigdor began his journalism career in Connecticut. He covered state and national politics for The Hartford Courant and for Hearst Connecticut Media publications, including Greenwich Time. He has described his early days at Greenwich Time as formative, recalling a feature story about residents born on Leap Day that reflected his interest in local reporting before he moved to the national stage.

Vigdor’s professional life is closely linked to photography. In addition to reporting, he maintains an extensive portfolio of celestial and street photography, with more than 90,000 images taken over several years. His work is available through his website, neilvigdor.photoshelter.com. He has exhibited his photography locally, including a show at the Perrot Memorial Library.

His photographic practice spans urban landscapes and night skies. He has described the patience required to capture a Fourth of July fireworks display in Brooklyn’s DUMBO neighborhood, where photographers stood in a single spot for hours to frame the Manhattan Bridge. Because tripods were not permitted, they used fence posts to steady their cameras for long exposures.

In Connecticut, Vigdor photographed a private firefly sanctuary in New Canaan maintained by Bill and Mary Ellen McDonald. To capture the density of fireflies against a night sky centered on Polaris, he used stacking software originally designed for star trails, layering 160 images into a single composite.

His work also brings him into proximity with prominent figures in journalism. During the 2024 campaign cycle, he often worked alongside Doug Mills, chief White House photographer for The New York Times and a multiple Pulitzer Prize winner. Vigdor has cited Mills’s technical precision in Butler, Pennsylvania, during the assassination attempt on Donald J. Trump, where Mills used a Sony Alpha 1 camera with a shutter speed of 1/8,000th of a second.

Vigdor’s reporting assignments have at times required immediate mobilization. On one occasion, he Neil Vigdor spoke of his work as a New York Times political news reporter and expert photographer.

Whether it is tracking a snowy owl at Long Beach in Stratford or using a neutral density filter to take a long daytime exposure that blurs the waves at Greenwich Point, his work is driven by a desire to express visually what words sometimes cannot.

was dispatched to a protest at the Manhattan courthouse during Trump’s trial with 27 minutes’ notice to identify a campaign surrogate for President Biden. The guest was actor Robert De Niro, who addressed the crowd before being heckled by Trump supporters.

He has also reflected on the changing economics of journalism. Vigdor worked for 18 months at The Hartford Courant, which dates to 1764 and is recognized as the oldest continuously published newspaper in the United States. He has noted the impact of its acquisition by Alden Global Capital, a hedge fund known for cost-cutting, as part of a broader decline in regional journalism. In contrast, he has observed that The New York Times has expanded its digital offerings, including games and a cooking app.

Even as his reporting places him at the center of national political events, Vigdor continues to pursue quieter subjects. He has photographed a snowy owl at Long Beach in Stratford and used a neutral density filter to create long daytime exposures of waves at Greenwich Point. He has also traveled to Bruges, Belgium, to photograph Gothic architecture and Christmas markets.

For Vigdor, journalism and photography operate in parallel. One documents events as they unfold; the other seeks a different vantage point. Both demand preparation, technical fluency and a tolerance for uncertainty.

Top 10 Reasons New Canaan Is Unique, 2026 Edition

BY JOHN ENGEL

Fourteen years ago, I wrote “Top 10 Reasons New Canaan is Unique” in the New Canaan Advertiser. The article was reprinted in the Patch, where you can still find it. It’s time to update that list and note what has changed.

1. Schools

In 2012, we had the top school system in Connecticut, and we still do. According to Niche, we’re currently #2, behind Westport, ahead of Darien and Wilton. USNews ranks South School #3 in the state, behind schools in Greenwich and Fairfield, but SchoolDigger still has New Canaan as #1, two years in a row.

Schools are the top reason young families move to New Canaan, and the knock-on effect is that seniors often move here to be near their grandchildren. No other district has this consistent pattern of excellence district-wide over the span of several decades.

2. Taxes

We had, and have, the third-lowest tax rate in Connecticut (ignoring Washington and Salisbury). New Canaan (16.61) is still behind Greenwich (12.04) and Darien (15.48), but over the past eight years (2018-2025), the average increase in the total amount raised by taxation has been only 2.3% per year. New Canaan has exhibited extraordinary fiscal discipline while investing in major infrastructure projects during a decade where inflation averaged 3.05%.

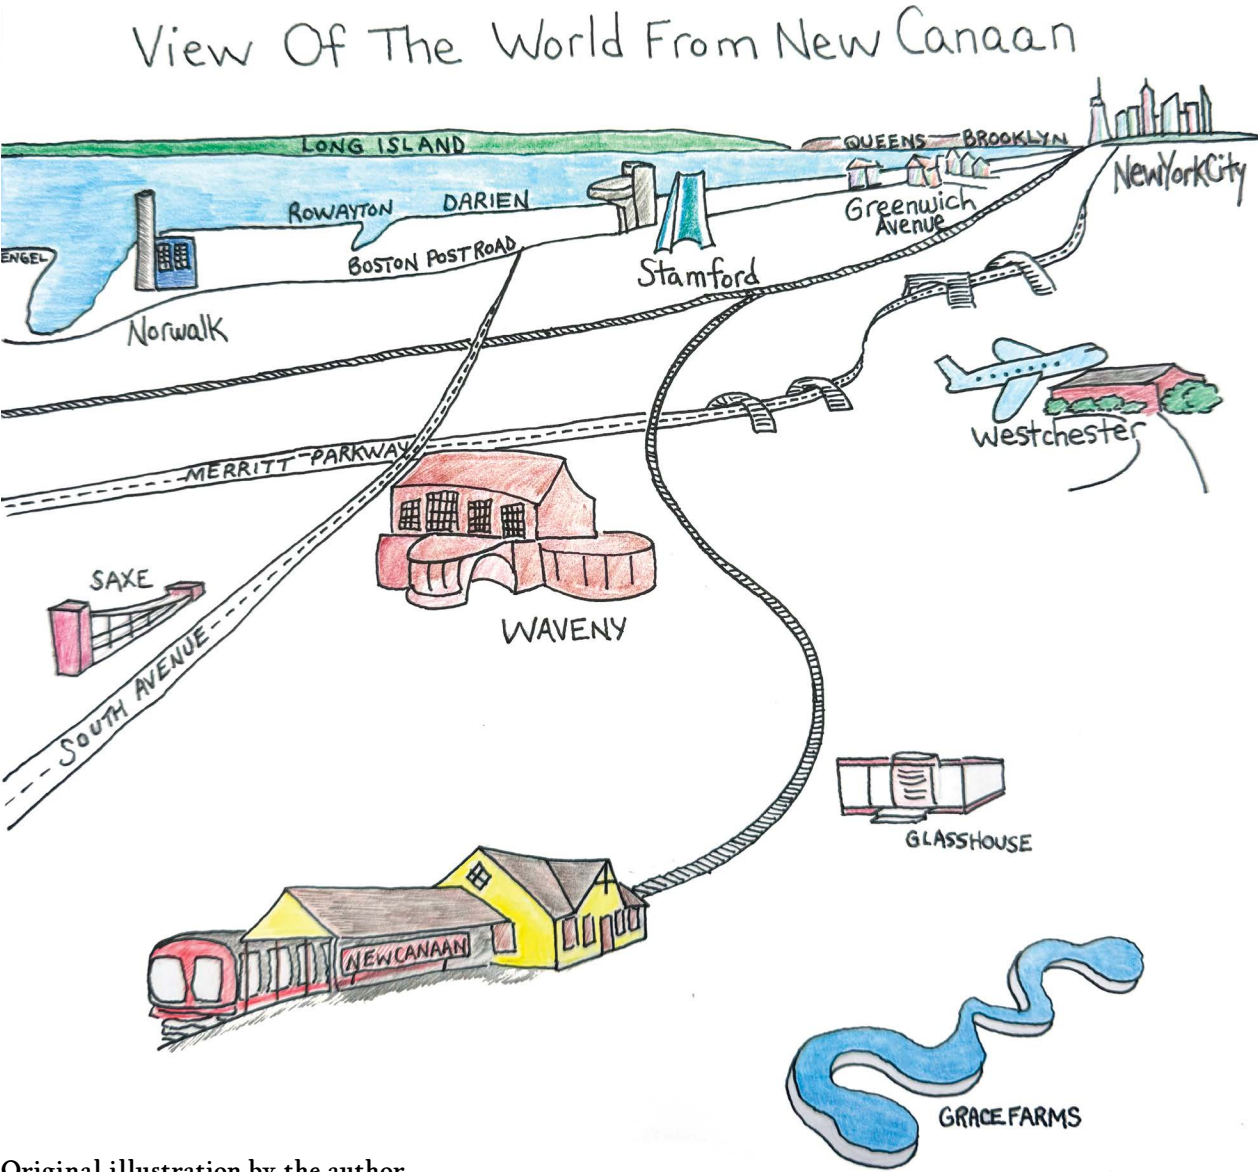

3. Village

The charm of a walkable village sets New Canaan apart from her rivals and remains a major asset, defended fiercely. In a dozen years, we’ve renovated the Playhouse, town hall, and fire and police stations, and preserved our historic library. We’re not stuck in the past: St. Aloysius school, the Millport apartments, Canaan Parish, Burtis Avenue, and The Vue are examples of major projects in a downtown soon to get its first hotel.

4. Restaurants

New Canaan has become the de-facto destination for food in Fairfield County, with over 30 first-class restaurants packed into the walkable downtown, each spilling out onto the expanded sidewalks during warm weather.

The effect has been profound. Watch as drivers, walkers, and shoppers connect with diners as they thread their way past the tables, calling out greetings,

Original illustration by the author.

Most towns change. Few towns change without losing themselves. What strikes me isn’t what’s different; it’s what has held.

waving hello, and just generally connecting. It’s really quite remarkable and unique in a town of this size in 2026.

5. Clubs

While town life doesn’t revolve around membership to a club, there are over a hundred clubs here, bringing people together and serving every possible interest, including the Winter Club, the Field Club, the Racquet Club, the Rotary Club and the Garden Club, to name a few. The newly renovated New Canaan Country Club is limited to New Canaan residents, a fact that makes it uniquely locally oriented in Fairfield County. The YMCA, New Canaan Library, Lapham Center, and Men’s Club are very active, hosting many specialty clubs.

6. Waveny Park

Unchanging, and yet so changed these dozen years. The town pool was new. We added new paddle courts, and baseball and softball fields. We expanded and renovated the Carriage Barn, Powerhouse Theater, and playground. We added the Boucher Rink and, at the mansion, we fixed the roof and installed new ramps, bathrooms, and an elevator.

The Family Fourth is still the biggest party, but Caffeine & Carburetors is now a fixture in Waveny twice a year, and nearly as large. This 130-acre park gets a quarter-million visitors per year — not hard to imagine if you’ve seen 800 children playing soccer there on a Saturday morning in season.

7. Recreation

A dozen years ago, Irwin Park’s rubber jogging paths were relatively new, and Mead Park was freshly dredged for the first time in decades. Once COVID hit, the world took a greater interest in parks and open space, for a while there, elbowing our neighbors out of the way as we took to hiking the trails with a vengeance.

The New Canaan Land Trust created the Green Link connecting Irwin Park to the Nature Center, acquired the Silvermine-Fowler preserve, and restored dozens of new trails on 60 properties they own around town. Grace Farms opened in 2015 and has been a major draw (worldwide) for its architecture, its programming, and recreation of all sorts.

Organized recreation? Probably too many to name: Parks & Rec runs the town pool, tennis, pickleball, and dog parks. Add the renovated YMCA, New Canaan Chamber Music, Carriage Barn and Silvermine Arts, the Powerhouse, Summer Theater, Academy of Dance, Racquet Club, youth football and lacrosse under the lights at Dunning, paddle at Waveny, platform tennis tournaments in January snow, and adult leagues that fill before the email confirmation hits your inbox. It isn’t one field, court, or stage. Recreation here is layered: passive and organized, competitive and contemplative.

8. Community Spirit

I wrote, “From Christmas Caroling on God’s Acre to our Memorial Day Parade down Main Street, to the Ice Cream Social at the Historical Society and our spectacular 4th of July celebration complete with fireworks at Waveny Park, we above all share the guiding belief that all are welcome. While young families move in, our baby boomers and seniors seem to be staying on, making our community rich in its diversity.”

That was true in 2012. All of that is still true, and we’ve added or improved so many more community events since. Ballet on the Library Green, Restaurant Week, Caffeine & Carburetors, Christmas Stroll, Menorah lighting, the Halloween parade, and Veterans Day on God’s Acre are just some of the fixtures of community life. The New Canaan Community Foundation helps anchor that effort, supporting the nonprofits and volunteers who quietly do the work between the events. Community spirit here isn’t just tradition. It’s participation — structured, supported, and passed from one generation to the next.

9. 44 Miles to New York City

This is one thing that has not changed, although how we think about commuting has. Cars are faster and safer, and the Merritt Parkway that we rely on is more beautiful, having been repaved and thousands of hazardous trees cleared away. The biggest change since 2012 is our ability to work from home, or the park, in a wireless world, making our dependence on New York City just a bit different.

10. Next Station to Heaven

I’m speaking about New Canaan’s train station, where train routes have started and ended since 1868, ensuring New Canaanites always get a seat. If you’ve missed the New Canaan train and had to board in Darien, you know the difference. It’s truly a unique arrangement that we have here.

Fourteen years ago, these 10 distinctions were advantages. Today, they are moats.

Schools that stayed excellent. Taxes that stayed disciplined. A village that modernized without losing scale. Parks expanded. Restaurants improved. Community rituals multiplied. Even commuting evolved without diminishing proximity.

Most towns change. Few towns change without losing themselves. What strikes me isn’t what’s different; it’s what has held.

New Canaan hasn’t chased trends. It has layered strength on top of strength. And that, more than any individual item on this list, may be what truly makes it unique.

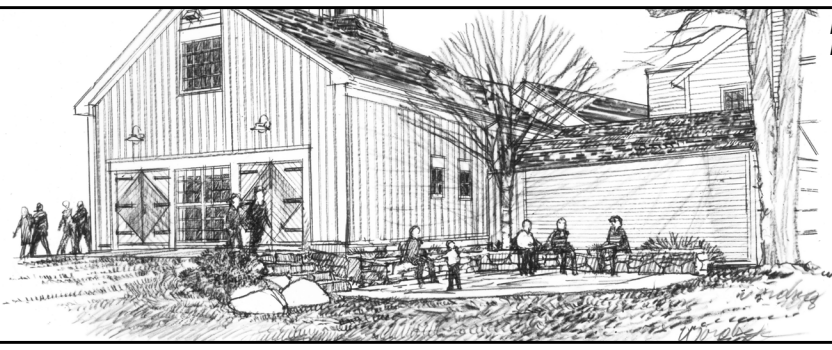

John Engel is a broker on the Engel Team at Douglas Elliman, and his earliest memories of New Canaan are of getting lost in the woods behind St. Luke’s School, circa 1973. Change is hard. Every improvement listed above followed real community debate and compromise. That process can be uncomfortable, but it is also the reason the town evolves without losing itself. When residents participate, the results tend to endure.

Horoscopes

Horoscope: February 19-25, 2026

This week marks a seasonal shift as the Sun moves into Pisces, ushering in a more reflective, intuitive, and emotionally attuned atmosphere. After the clarity and innovation of Aquarius season, the cosmic tone softens. Compassion, creativity, and spiritual awareness take center stage. With Mercury and Venus also traveling through Pisces, communication becomes more nuanced and heartfelt. This is a week for listening closely, speaking gently, and allowing intuition to guide practical decisions. As the Moon waxes, momentum builds toward new emotional beginnings.

Weekly Forecast by Sign

Aries (March 21 – April 19)

The pace slows, inviting introspection. Rather than charging ahead, focus on emotional alignment. Practical advice: carve out quiet time to assess what truly motivates you before committing to new plans. Reflection now prevents missteps later.

Taurus (April 20 – May 20)

Friendships and long-term goals gain emotional depth. You may find yourself drawn to meaningful conversations with trusted allies. Practical advice: strengthen connections by being honest about your hopes for the months ahead. Collaboration benefits from sincerity.

Gemini (May 21 – June 20)

Career and reputation are highlighted, but through a softer lens. Communication matters more than visibility. Practical advice: clarify expectations with supervisors or partners and avoid assumptions. Thoughtful wording strengthens professional standing.

Cancer (June 21 – July 22)

Pisces season supports your natural emotional intelligence. Travel, study, or philosophical reflection may call to you. Practical advice: explore ideas that expand your worldview, but anchor inspiration in realistic next steps.

Leo (July 23 – August 22)

Shared resources and deeper emotional bonds are in focus. Conversations around trust and mutual support may surface. Practical advice: approach sensitive topics calmly and with patience; transparency builds lasting security.

Virgo (August 23 – September 22)

Relationships take center stage as Pisces energy activates your partnership zone. Practical advice: listen fully before responding. Mutual understanding strengthens commitments, especially in close personal or business relationships.

Libra (September 23 – October 22)

Daily routines and wellness require gentle attention. Practical advice: adjust your schedule to allow rest and reflection alongside productivity. Balanced habits support both mental and physical health.

Scorpio (October 23 – November 21)

Creativity and romance deepen. Emotional authenticity draws others toward you. Practical advice: express affection openly and invest time in pursuits that restore joy. Vulnerability becomes strength this week.

Sagittarius (November 22 – December 21)

Home and family life benefit from patience and empathy. Practical advice: address lingering tensions calmly and create space for shared understanding. Small gestures of reassurance go a long way.

Capricorn (December 22 – January 19)

Communication flows intuitively. You may find it easier to articulate complex thoughts. Practical advice: write, plan, or initiate discussions that require emotional intelligence. Clear dialogue now prevents confusion later.

Aquarius (January 20 – February 18)

Financial clarity becomes important as the emotional tone of the week shifts. Practical advice: review budgets carefully and make decisions that reflect both logic and long-term values. Stability grows through measured choices.

Pisces (February 19 – March 20)

This is your season. Energy builds around personal renewal and self-expression. Practical advice: set intentions that align with who you are becoming, not who you were. Confidence grows when you honor your intuition.only with others, but with the future version of yourself you're becoming.

Summary:

February 19–25 invites a move from intellect to intuition. With the Sun, Mercury, and Venus in Pisces, this week favors empathy, creative expression, and meaningful conversation. Slow down, listen carefully, and let emotional clarity guide practical action.

THE HOUSE AT POOH CORNER

CHAPTER VII

IN WHICH Tigger Is Unbounced

One day Rabbit and Piglet were sitting outside Pooh's front door listening to Rabbit, and Pooh was sitting with them. It was a drowsy summer afternoon, and the Forest was full of gentle sounds, which all seemed to be saying to Pooh, "Don't listen to Rabbit, listen to me." So he got into a comfortable position for not listening to Rabbit, and from time to time he opened his eyes to say "Ah!" and then closed them again to say "True," and from time to time Rabbit said, "You see what I mean, Piglet" very earnestly, and Piglet nodded earnestly to show that he did.

"In fact," said Rabbit, coming to the end of it at last, "Tigger's getting so Bouncy nowadays that it's time we taught him a lesson. Don't you think so, Piglet?"

Piglet said that Tigger was very Bouncy, and that if they could think of a way of unbouncing him, it would be a Very Good Idea.

"Just what I feel," said Rabbit. "What do you say, Pooh?"

Pooh opened his eyes with a jerk and said, "Extremely."

"Extremely what?" asked Rabbit.

"What you were saying," said Pooh. "Undoubtably."

Piglet gave Pooh a stiffening sort of nudge, and Pooh, who felt more and more that he was somewhere else, got up slowly and began to look for himself.

"But how shall we do it?" asked Piglet. "What sort of a lesson, Rabbit?"

"That's the point," said Rabbit.

The word "lesson" came back to Pooh as one he had heard before somewhere.

"There's a thing called Twy-stymes," he said. "Christopher Robin tried to teach it to me once, but it didn't."

"What didn't?" said Rabbit.

"Didn't what?" said Piglet.

Pooh shook his head.

"I don't know," he said. "It just didn't. What are we talking about?"

"Pooh," said Piglet reproachfully, "haven't you been listening to what Rabbit was saying?"

"I listened, but I had a small piece of fluff in my ear. Could you say it again, please, Rabbit?"

Rabbit never minded saying things again, so he asked where he should begin from; and when Pooh had said from the moment when the fluff got in his ear, and Rabbit had asked when that was, and Pooh had said he didn't know because he hadn't heard properly, Piglet settled it all by saying that what they were trying to do was, they were just trying to think of a way to get the bounces out of Tigger, because however much you liked him, you couldn't deny it, he did bounce.

"Oh, I see," said Pooh.

"There's too much of him," said Rabbit, "that's what it comes to."

Pooh tried to think, and all he could think of was something which didn't help at all. So he hummed it very quietly to himself.

If Rabbit
Was bigger
And fatter
And stronger,
Or bigger
Than Tigger,
If Tigger was smaller,
Then Tigger's bad habit
Of bouncing at Rabbit
Would matter

No longer,
If Rabbit
Was taller.

"What was Pooh saying?" asked Rabbit. "Any good?"

"No," said Pooh sadly. "No good."

"Well, I've got an idea," said Rabbit, "and here it is. We take Tigger for a long explore, somewhere where he's never been, and we lose him there, and next morning we find him again, and—mark my words—he'll be a different Tigger altogether."

"Why?" said Pooh.

"Because he'll be a Humble Tigger. Because he'll be a Sad Tigger, a Melancholy Tigger, a Small and Sorry Tigger, an Oh-Rabbit-I-am-glad-to-see-you Tigger. That's why."

"Will he be glad to see me and Piglet, too?"

"Of course."

"That's good," said Pooh.

"I should hate him to go on being Sad," said Piglet doubtfully.

"Tiggers never go on being Sad," explained Rabbit. "They get over it with Astonishing Rapidity. I asked Owl, just to make sure, and he said that that's what they always get over it with. But if we can make Tigger feel Small and Sad just for five minutes, we shall have done a good deed."

"Would Christopher Robin think so?" asked Piglet.

"Yes," said Rabbit. "He'd say 'You've done a good deed, Piglet. I would have done it myself, only I happened to be doing something else. Thank you, Piglet.' And Pooh, of course."

Piglet felt very glad about this, and he saw at once that what they were going to do to Tigger was a good thing to do, and as Pooh and Rabbit were doing it with him, it was a thing which even a Very Small Animal could wake up in the morning and be comfortable about doing. So the only question was, where should they lose Tigger?

"We'll take him to the North Pole," said Rabbit, "because it was a very long explore finding it, so it will be a very long explore for Tigger unfinding it again."

It was now Pooh's turn to feel very glad, because it was he who had first found the North Pole, and when they got there, Tigger would see a notice which said, "Discovered by Pooh, Pooh found it," and then Tigger would know, which perhaps he didn't know, the sort of Bear Pooh was. That sort of Bear.

So it was arranged that they should start next morning, and that Rabbit, who lived near Kanga and Roo and Tigger, should now go home and ask Tigger what he was doing tomorrow, because if he wasn't doing anything, what about coming for an explore and getting Pooh and Piglet to come too? And if Tigger said "Yes" that would be all right, and if he said "No"——

"He won't," said Rabbit. "Leave it to me." And he went off busily.

The next day was quite a different day. Instead of being hot and sunny, it was cold and misty. Pooh didn't mind for himself, but when he thought of all the honey the bees wouldn't be making, a cold and misty day always made him feel sorry for them. He said so to Piglet when Piglet came to fetch him, and Piglet said that he wasn't thinking of that so much, but of how cold and miserable it would be being lost all day and night on the top of the Forest. But when he and Pooh had got to Rabbit's house, Rabbit said it was just the day for them, because Tigger always bounced on ahead of everybody, and as soon as he got out of sight, they would hurry away in the other direction, and he would never see them again.

"Not never?" said Piglet.

"Well, not until we find him again, Piglet. Tomorrow, or whenever it is. Come on. He's waiting for us."

When they got to Kanga's house, they found that Roo was waiting too, being a great friend of Tigger's, which made it Awkward; but Rabbit whispered "Leave this to me" behind his paw to Pooh, and went up to Kanga.

"I don't think Roo had better come," he said. "Not today."

"Why not?" said Roo, who wasn't supposed to be listening.

"Nasty cold day," said Rabbit, shaking his head. "And you were coughing this morning."

"How do you know?" asked Roo indignantly.

"Oh, Roo, you never told me," said Kanga reproachfully.

"It was a Biscuit Cough," said Roo, "not one you tell about."

"I think not today, dear. Another day."

"Tomorrow?" said Roo hopefully.

"We'll see," said Kanga.

"You're always seeing, and nothing ever happens," said Roo sadly.

"Nobody could see on a day like this, Roo," said Rabbit. "I don't expect we shall get very far, and then this afternoon we'll all—we'll all—we'll—ah, Tigger, there you are. Come on. Good-bye, Roo! This afternoon we'll—come on, Pooh! All ready? That's right. Come on."

So they went. At first Pooh and Rabbit and Piglet walked together, and Tigger ran round them in circles, and then, when the path got narrower, Rabbit, Piglet and Pooh walked one after another, and Tigger ran round them in oblongs, and by-and-by, when the gorse got very prickly on each side of the path, Tigger ran up and down in front of them, and sometimes he bounced into Rabbit and sometimes he didn't. And as they got higher, the mist got thicker, so that Tigger kept disappearing, and then when you thought he wasn't there, there he was again, saying "I say, come on," and before you could say anything, there he wasn't.

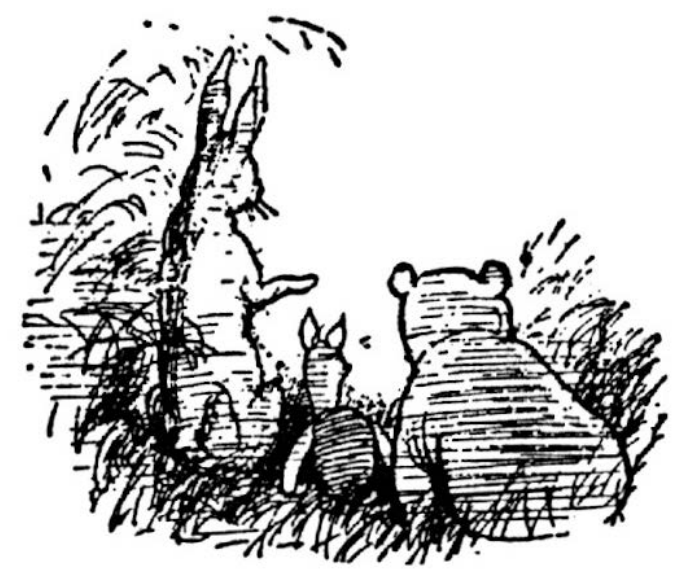

Rabbit turned round and nudged Piglet.

"The next time," he said. "Tell Pooh."

"The next time," said Piglet to Pooh.

"The next what?" said Pooh to Piglet.

Tigger appeared suddenly, bounced into Rabbit, and disappeared again. "Now!" said Rabbit. He jumped into a hollow by the side of the path, and Pooh and Piglet jumped after him. They crouched in the bracken, listening. The Forest was very silent when you stopped and listened to it. They could see nothing and hear nothing.

"H'sh!" said Rabbit.

"I am," said Pooh.

There was a pattering noise ... then silence again.

"Hallo!" said Tigger, and he sounded so close suddenly that Piglet would have jumped if Pooh hadn't accidentally been sitting on most of him.

"Where are you?" called Tigger.

Rabbit nudged Pooh, and Pooh looked about for Piglet to nudge, but couldn't find him, and Piglet went on breathing wet bracken as quietly as he could, and felt very brave and excited.

"That's funny," said Tigger.

There was a moment's silence, and then they heard him pattering off again. For a little longer they waited, until the Forest had become so still that it almost frightened them, and then Rabbit got up and stretched himself.

"Well?" he whispered proudly. "There we are! Just as I said."

"I've been thinking," said Pooh, "and I think——"

"No," said Rabbit. "Don't. Run. Come on." And they all hurried off, Rabbit leading the way.

"Now," said Rabbit, after they had gone a little way, "we can talk. What were you going to say, Pooh?"

"Nothing much. Why are we going along here?"

"Because it's the way home."

"Oh!" said Pooh.

"I think it's more to the right," said Piglet nervously. "What do you think, Pooh?"

Pooh looked at his two paws. He knew that one of them was the right, and he knew that when you had decided which one of them was the right, then the other one was the left, but he never could remember how to begin.

"Well," he said slowly——

"Come on," said Rabbit. "I know it's this way." They went on. Ten minutes later they stopped again.

"It's very silly," said Rabbit, "but just for the moment I——Ah, of course. Come on...."

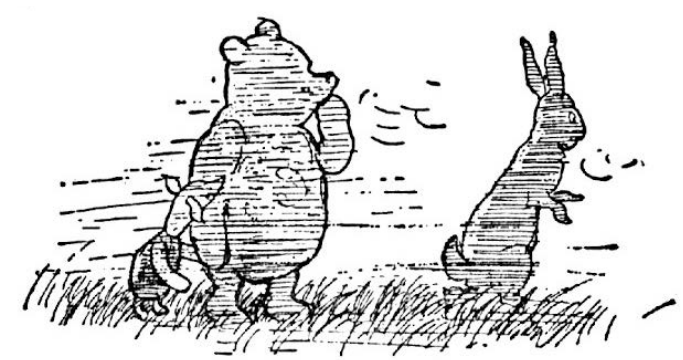

"Here we are," said Rabbit ten minutes later. "No, we're not...."

"Now," said Rabbit ten minutes later, "I think we ought to be getting—or are we a little bit more to the right than I thought?..."

"It's a funny thing," said Rabbit ten minutes later, "how everything looks the same in a mist. Have you noticed it, Pooh?"

Pooh said that he had.

"Lucky we know the Forest so well, or we might get lost," said Rabbit half an hour later, and he gave the careless laugh which you give when you know the Forest so well that you can't get lost.

Piglet sidled up to Pooh from behind.

"Pooh!" he whispered.

"Yes, Piglet?"

"Nothing," said Piglet, taking Pooh's paw. "I just wanted to be sure of you."

When Tigger had finished waiting for the others to catch him up, and they hadn't, and when he had got tired of having nobody to say, "I say, come on" to, he thought he would go home. So he trotted back; and the first thing Kanga said when she saw him was "There's a good Tigger. You're just in time for your Strengthening Medicine," and she poured it out for him. Roo said proudly, "I've had mine," and Tigger swallowed his and said, "So have I," and then he and Roo pushed each other about in a friendly way, and Tigger accidentally knocked over one or two chairs by accident, and Roo accidentally knocked over one on purpose, and Kanga said, "Now then, run along."

"Where shall we run along to?" asked Roo.

"You can go and collect some fir-cones for me," said Kanga, giving them a basket.

So they went to the Six Pine Trees, and threw fir-cones at each other until they had forgotten what they came for, and they left the basket under the trees and went back to dinner. And it was just as they were finishing dinner that Christopher Robin put his head in at the door.

"Where's Pooh?" he asked.

"Tigger dear, where's Pooh?" said Kanga. Tigger explained what had happened at the same time that Roo was explaining about his Biscuit Cough and Kanga was telling them not both to talk at once, so it was some time before Christopher Robin guessed that Pooh and Piglet and Rabbit were all lost in the mist on the top of the Forest.

"It's a funny thing about Tiggers," whispered Tigger to Roo, "how Tiggers never get lost."

"Why don't they, Tigger?"

"They just don't," explained Tigger. "That's how it is."

"Well," said Christopher Robin, "we shall have to go and find them, that's all. Come on, Tigger."

"I shall have to go and find them," explained Tigger to Roo.

"May I find them too?" asked Roo eagerly.

"I think not today, dear," said Kanga. "Another day."

"Well, if they're lost tomorrow, may I find them?"

"We'll see," said Kanga, and Roo, who knew what that meant, went into a corner, and practised jumping out at himself, partly because he wanted to practise this, and partly because he didn't want Christopher Robin and Tigger to think that he minded when they went off without him.

"The fact is," said Rabbit, "we've missed our way somehow."

They were having a rest in a small sand-pit on the top of the Forest. Pooh was getting rather tired of that sand-pit, and suspected it of following them about, because whichever direction they started in, they always ended up at it, and each time, as it came through the mist at them, Rabbit said triumphantly, "Now I know where we are!" and Pooh said sadly, "So do I," and Piglet said nothing. He had tried to think of something to say, but the only thing he could think of was, "Help, help!" and it seemed silly to say that, when he had Pooh and Rabbit with him.

"Well," said Rabbit, after a long silence in which nobody thanked him for the nice walk they were having, "we'd better get on, I suppose. Which way shall we try?"

"How would it be," said Pooh slowly, "if, as soon as we're out of sight of this Pit, we try to find it again?"

"What's the good of that?" said Rabbit.

"Well," said Pooh, "we keep looking for Home and not finding it, so I thought that if we looked for this Pit, we'd be sure not to find it, which would be a Good Thing, because then we might find something that we weren't looking for, which might be just what we were looking for, really."

"I don't see much sense in that," said Rabbit.

"No," said Pooh humbly, "there isn't. But there was going to be when I began it. It's just that something happened to it on the way."

"If I walked away from this Pit, and then walked back to it, of course I should find it."

"Well, I thought perhaps you wouldn't," said Pooh. "I just thought."

"Try," said Piglet suddenly. "We'll wait here for you."

Rabbit gave a laugh to show how silly Piglet was, and walked into the mist. After he had gone a hundred yards, he turned and walked back again ... and after Pooh and Piglet had waited twenty minutes for him, Pooh got up.

"I just thought," said Pooh. "Now then, Piglet, let's go home."

"But, Pooh," cried Piglet, all excited, "do you know the way?"

"No," said Pooh. "But there are twelve pots of honey in my cupboard, and they've been calling to me for hours. I couldn't hear them properly before, because Rabbit would talk, but if nobody says anything except those twelve pots, I think, Piglet, I shall know where they're calling from. Come on."

They walked off together; and for a long time Piglet said nothing, so as not to interrupt the pots; and then suddenly he made a squeaky noise ... and an oo-noise ... because now he began to know where he was; but he still didn't dare to say so out loud, in case he wasn't. And just when he was getting so sure of himself that it didn't matter whether the pots went on calling or not, there was a shout from in front of them, and out of the mist came Christopher Robin.

"Oh, there you are," said Christopher Robin carelessly, trying to pretend that he hadn't been Anxious.

"Here we are," said Pooh.

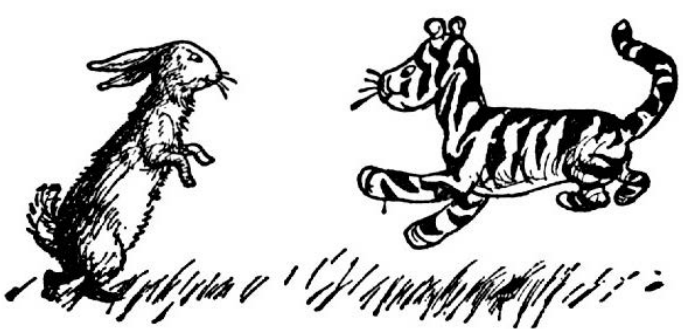

"Where's Rabbit?"

"I don't know," said Pooh.

"Oh—well, I expect Tigger will find him. He's sort of looking for you all."

"Well," said Pooh, "I've got to go home for something, and so has Piglet, because we haven't had it yet, and——"

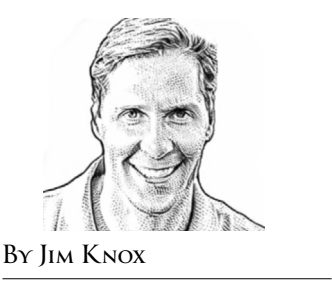

"I'll come and watch you," said Christopher Robin.

So he went home with Pooh, and watched him for quite a long time ... and all the time he was watching, Tigger was tearing round the Forest making loud yapping noises for Rabbit. And at last a very Small and Sorry Rabbit heard him. And the Small and Sorry Rabbit rushed through the mist at the noise, and it suddenly turned into Tigger; a Friendly Tigger, a Grand Tigger, a Large and Helpful Tigger, a Tigger who bounced, if he bounced at all, in just the beautiful way a Tigger ought to bounce.

"Oh, Tigger, I am glad to see you," cried Rabbit.

One of the Most Successful Marine Mammals

By JIM KNOX

I remember them squinting--blinking back the silvery glare of Long Island Sound's ice and waves magnified through the Swarovski spotting scope. Bundled up in layers upon layers against the January gusts on the jutting promontory of Stamford's Cove Island Park, my daughters and I were finally rewarded with a glimpse of our quarry. There, fully half a mile out onto the freezing Sound, 14 Harbor Seals lay hauled out on the rocks exposed at low tide. Dozing atop the rocky islet in apparent bliss just inches from the frigid waters, they basked as if lounging on tropical sands. Flexing our gloved fingers to keep them limber for note taking, we scribbled our observations while the frenzied wind whipped strands of hair across our eyes. Along with several dozen fellow volunteers, we were piloting a citizen science seal observation study with colleagues at The Maritime Aquarium. Our goal--to document the presence, diversity and basic behaviors of these magnificent marine mammals making an historic return to their native waters.

The Harbor Seal (Phoca vitulina), is one of the world's most successful and widespread marine mammals. Boasting a range which includes: the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts of North America, Greenland, Iceland, Atlantic and Arctic Coastal Europe as well as the Kamchatka Peninsula and the Bering Sea, these small seals command a big presence. These beautiful creatures possess a rounded, dog-like snout, large dark eyes, clawed flippers, a plump body and a sleek coat ranging from light tan to silver or blue-gray with spots or speckling. Reaching lengths of no more than 6 feet and weights of just 285 pounds, they are denizens of coastal waters where they hunt for fish, crustaceans and shellfish. Historically, it was the Harbor Seal's specialty as a coastal species hunting near shore waters that placed it within easy range of sealers' harpoons, hunters' rifles and fishermen's nets. This proximity amplified human threats including: net and gear entanglement, illegal feeding, vessel traffic and collisions, chemical contamination such as oil spills, and habitat degradation. With implementation of The Marine Mammal Protection Act in 1972, came a gradual reversal in population trends and health for the Harbor Seals. With protection came greater awareness of their needs and fragility.

Hunted to extirpation or regional extinction from U.S. waters during the 20th century, they have staged a bold comeback in Connecticut's coastal waters.

Hunted to extirpation or regional extinction from U.S. waters during the 20th century, they have staged a bold comeback in Connecticut's coastal waters. In fact, due to their status as a marine mammal which affords them full federal protection, including a mandatory minimum approach distance of 150 feet, they have made an occasional "nuisance" of themselves. In recent years, Harbor Seals have been spotted: hauling out on Fairfield County harbor police docks, 37 miles up the Connecticut River on Wesleyan University's Crew boat ramp, and even lounging on the hulls of nuclear submarines at the U.S. Naval Submarine Base in Groton!...I did say bold.

From an ecological standpoint, the Harbor Seal's role is extremely complex and only partially understood. What's certain is its status as a mid level predator, providing benefits including balance of predatory fish stocks which in turn produce more robust, stable populations of harvested fish and shellfish species.

While its ecological role is paramount, there is another aspect to these endearing marine mammals which is inestimable. Though classified as a meso (mid-level) aquatic carnivore, the Harbor Seal, by any terrestrial measure, is a large carnivore which inhabits the same waterways and beaches as humans. Other than responding to episodes of illegal feeding or harassment, it does so peacefully--with no aggression.

This is quite remarkable. We have a 6-foot-long, 200+ pound torpedo of a carnivore possessing jaws resembling a Mountain Lion's. It can power through the water at speeds of 20 miles per hour, reverse direction in a fraction of a second, launch its entire body airborne and it does not attack us clumsy, nosy humans splashing in its midst.

face which catches our eyes and opens our hearts. That's okay, because we ultimately conserve those wild creatures which touch us. Thankfully, the Harbor Seal is just as resilient as it is adorable. It's robust recovery not only provides evidence of its status as an indicator species, confirming the vastly improved health of our coasts and the rivers which flow to them. It also provides us with well-founded hope that we can indeed protect what we love.

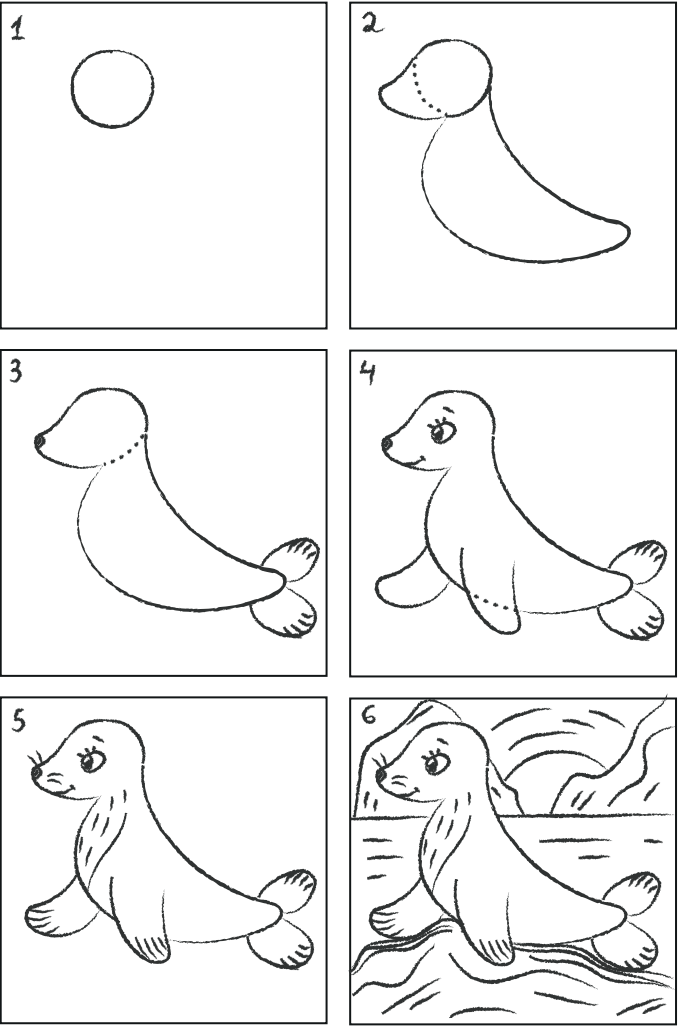

As a zoologist, I suspected the seal study held great promise to impart knowledge, understanding and caring toward the protection of this key species. As a father witnessing his children's smiling faces and looks of wonder each time they spotted the seals safe and sound...I got all the proof I ever needed.

Jim Knox serves as the Curator of Education for Connecticut's Beardsley Zoo and as a Science Adviser for The Bruce Museum. His passions include studying our planet's rarest creatures and sharing his work with others who love the natural world.

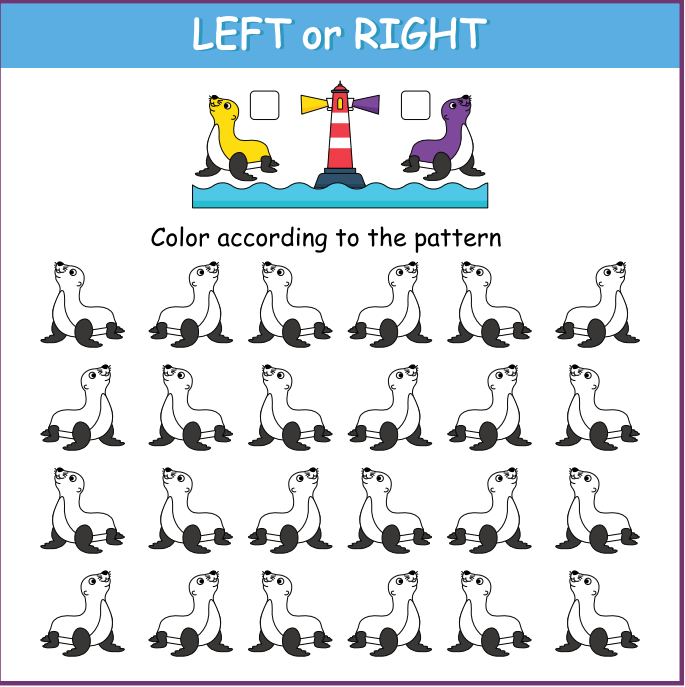

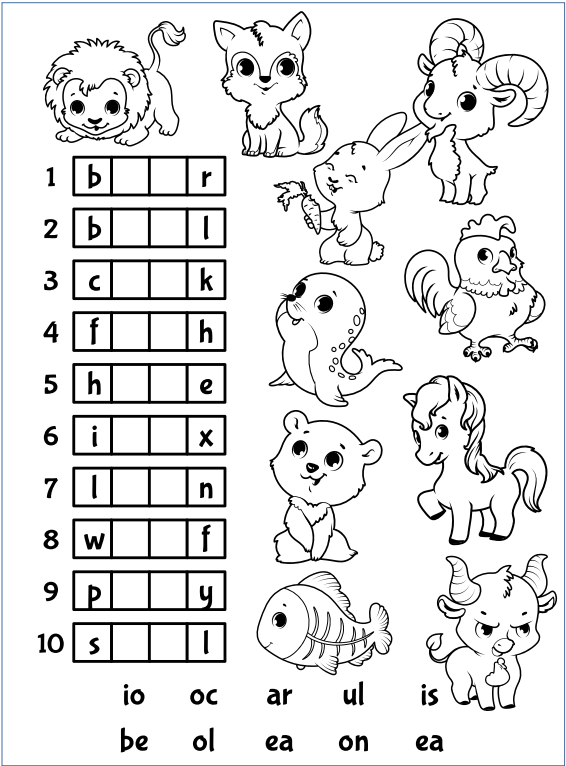

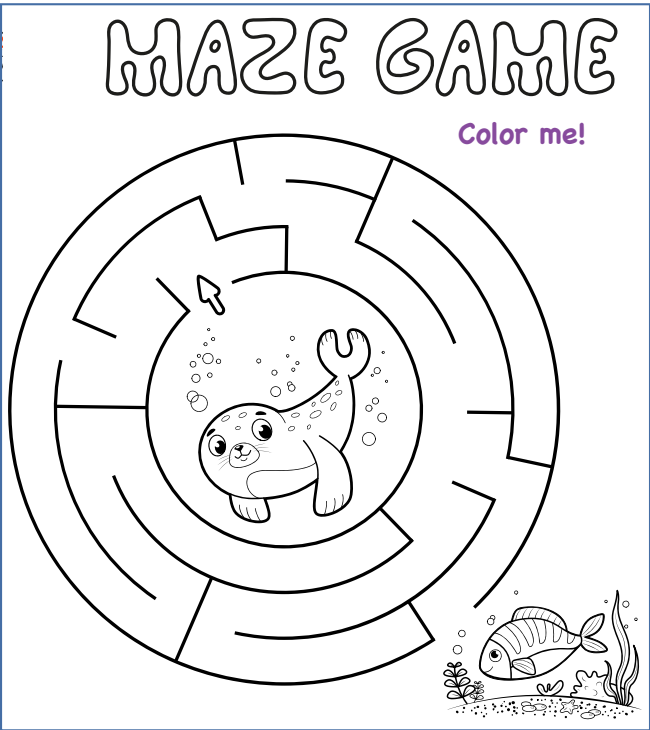

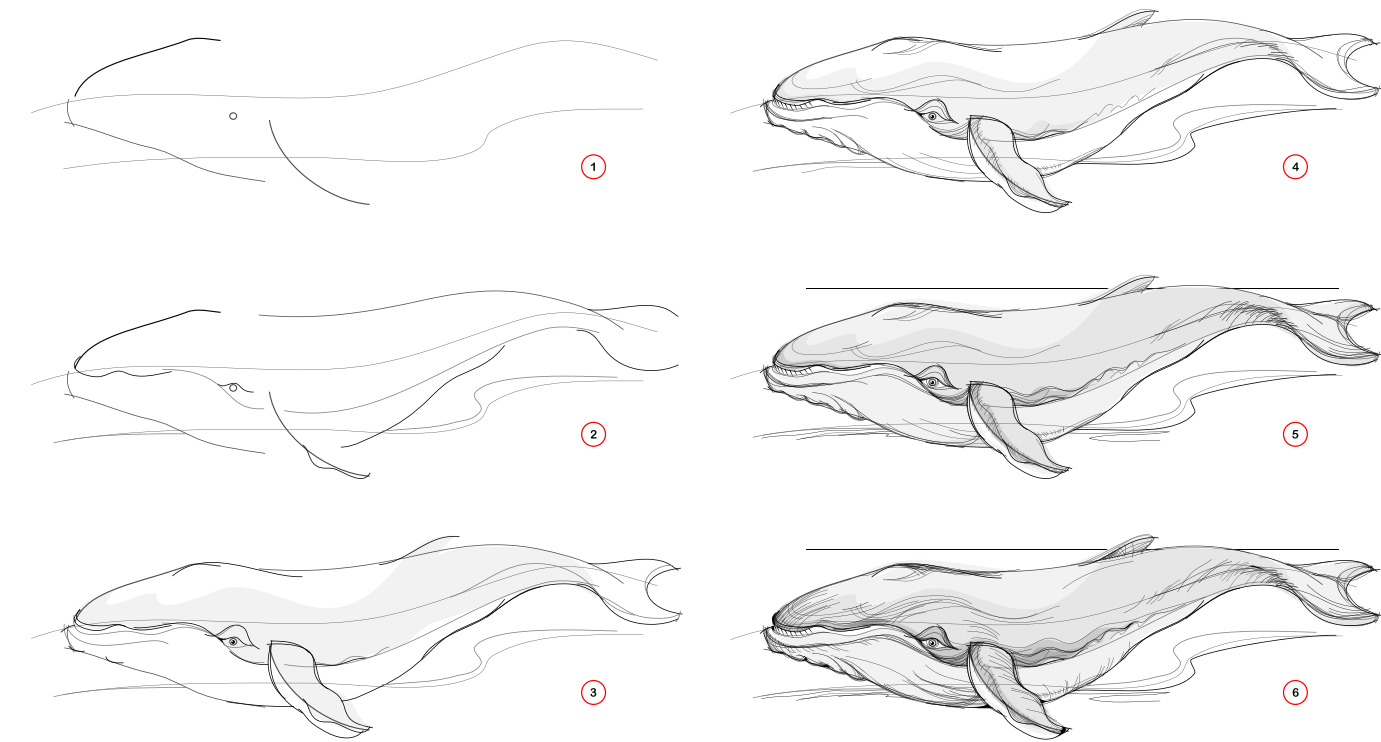

The Harbor Seal

While we focus on the cute, we must not lose sight of the fact that these mammals are superb hunters.

Yet it is the seal's adorable, big-eyed, whiskered, puppyish

Calvin and Hobbes

by WATTERSON

OUTRAGE! WHY SHOULD I GO TO BED? I'M NOT TIRED! IT'S ONLY 7:30! THIS IS TYRANNY! I'M!

GOOD NIGHT, CALVIN.

WILL YOU CHECK FOR MONSTERS UNDER THE BED?

NO MONSTERS. YOU'RE SAFE.

WHAT ABOUT IN THE DRESSER?

CALVIN, I'M SURE THERE ARE NO MONSTERS IN YOUR DRESSER. GO TO SLEEP.

GREAT. I'LL BET THAT'S WHERE THEY ALL ARE. THEY'LL COME OUT AND KILL US AS SOON AS WE FALL ASLEEP.

SO WHO'S GOING TO FALL ASLEEP?

WELL, WE'LL JUST HAVE TO GET THE MONSTERS FIRST. YOU IRRITATE THEM WITH THIS HORN, AND I'LL NAIL 'EM WITH MY DART GUN WHEN THEY COME OUT!

GET READY! I HEAR ONE COMING!

HONK HONK HONK HONK

WHAT'S ALL THE NOISE?!

AAIEEE!!

A MONSTER IN THE HALLWAY!!

DEAR, WILL YOU COME UP HERE A MINUTE?

I THINK I WOUNDED HIM. GIVE ME THE BAT AND I'LL FINISH HIM OFF!
