

DAY THREE — BUILDING FAITH AT HOME

Because faith is caught as much as it is taught.

Scripture: “These commandments...are to be on your hearts. Impress them on your children. Talk about them when you sit at home.” Deuteronomy 6:6-7

Faith shouldn't only happen on Sunday morning.

It happens around the dinner table.

In the car.

At bedtime.

When someone is hurting.

When life doesn't make sense.

We sometimes think teaching our children about God means getting them to church, teaching them Bible verses and making sure they know how to pray.

Those things matter.

But our children need to see what faith looks like in real life.

Let them see you pray when you're worried.

Let them hear you thank God when something good happens.

Let them watch you forgive someone.

Let them see you serve others.

Let them hear you talk about what God is teaching you.

Your source material reminds us to develop godly habits as a family—prayer, serving, worship, sacrifice, Bible study, giving and accountability.

You don't have to make family faith complicated.

Sometimes it's as simple as holding hands around the dinner table and saying, “Let's pray.”

Sometimes it's reading one Bible verse before bed.

Sometimes it's stopping in the middle of a difficult day and saying, “I don't know what we're going to do, but I know God is with us.”

Those moments become memories.

And those memories become foundations.

Your children are going to face things you can't fix for them.

There will be heartbreak.

Disappointment.

Fear.

Failure.

And eventually, they'll have to make decisions without you standing beside them.

That's why we don't just want our children to know about God.

We want them to know God.

Because someday, when Mom and Dad can't answer the question, fix the problem or make everything better, we want them to know where they can turn.

Choose one simple faith habit your family can begin today.

Pray together.

Read Scripture together.

Serve someone together.

Worship together.

Then keep doing it.

Consistency matters more than perfection.

Don't just raise children who know the Bible.

Raise children who know how to turn to God.

The greatest gift you can give your children isn't a perfect life.

It's a faith strong enough to carry them through an imperfect one.

Heavenly Father, help me make faith a natural part of our home. Let my children see You in the way we pray, serve, worship, forgive and love. Help me create habits that point their hearts toward You—not just while they're children, but for the rest of their lives. In Jesus Name We Pray, Amen.
