TIMING	Generally late Thursday night - Friday morning. See slide 2 for details.
HAZARDS & IMPACTS	 Slippery conditions may develop on untreated roads and bridges Friday morning as a result of snow or ice. The image at left depicts the NWS Winter Storm Severity Index based on our current forecast. The area in the light gray color is where we currently forecast wintry precipitation to be possible but with minimal impacts. Yellow and orange areas highlight the areas where minor to moderate impacts such as hazardous travel conditions are most likely.
NWS ALERTS	None at this time.
FORECAST CHALLENGES	 Timing the change of precipitation types is always challenging. Surface temperature trends and precipitation rates together will be critical in determining the magnitude of impacts.
ADDITIONAL INFORMATION	 Confidence remains low in the forecast accumulations although occurrence of light wintry precipitation appears likely in the mountains and northwest NC Piedmont.
POST-EVENT OUTLOOK	 Precip will change to rain in most areas by early Friday afternoon, and most likely taper off as rain Friday night. However, precip chances remain through Sunday with a front looking to remaining stalled to our south.
NEXT BRIEFING	By 5 PM EST Wednesday, December 3.
