

Today's Q106 Hot Weather Excuse Note

_____ is excused from work today due to extremely hot and humid temps. Said employee will not be in, instead will find the nearest pool, lake, slip and slide, and or open fire hydrant. You should be comforted knowing your employee will be safely hydrated with plenty of fruity tasting drinks adorned with a little umbrella and slices of fruit. We here at Today's Q106 understand that there's work to be done, and losing one integral employee for the day could hinder productivity. But keep in mind, the first two hours of their workday is spent on social media, followed by an afternoon of extended bathroom breaks, texting dinner plans with their spouse, and sprinkle in many trips to the coffee machine/water cooler, stopping to discuss office gossip with fellow co-workers, resulting in even less production around the office, not to mention one less person saying "OMG can you believe how hot it is today!?" we'd be surprised if you notice a difference between them being at work and not. In fact, it might be more productive if they're not. But don't fire them. That would be bad for morale
