HELPING THOSE AFFECTED BY RECENT OIL SPILL

An oil spill occurred on October 4 from an underwater pipeline owned by Houston-based Amplify Energy Corporation off the coast of California. The cause of the spill is yet unknown, with some speculation pointing the finger at a cargo ship that was docked in the area prior to the spill. The ship made several unusual movements, leading to speculation that it might have impacted the pipe causing a breach.

Although Amplify worked quickly to stop the leak, more than 100,000 gallons of oil spilled into the ocean and reached the shores of Huntington Beach. The spill left a swath of oil along the beachfront. It impacted Huntington Beach, as well as the Santa Ana River Trail and Talbert Park.

Many homeowners sustained damage to their property and are entitled to compensation for their inconvenience. If your home, business, or other personal property suffered damage because of the spill, call the lawyers at ACTS Law at 833-ACTS-LAW and we will review your case. We have the experience and resources to stand up to corporations and hold them accountable for their negligence.

STAY OFF SOCIAL MEDIA AFTER A CAR ACCIDENT

Although social media is a great way to keep in touch with friends and family, it can be a fountain of excessive information which can get you into trouble if you are involved in a lawsuit. While your lawyer is working on your case, remember that the other side is doing the same. That could include an insurance adjuster or opposing counsel.

In either instance, they will be looking for anything to damage your case or reduce the amount of money their client will have to dole out. Although it can be difficult, you should stay off social media until the conclusion of your case. It is not enough simply to refrain from discussing the case in your social media posts. Other, more innocuous posts can be used against you.

For instance, if you are claiming to be injured and your social media tags your location at a gym or yoga studio, that can be used to demonstrate that you did not sustain the injury you claimed to have received. Also, if you post updates on your health and it fluctuates, an insurance adjuster can also use that to demonstrate that you are improving and will not require as much compensation as you are seeking.

It is important to know that privacy settings on social media sites are irrelevant when it comes to keeping certain posts from opposing lawyers. If they believe a post is relevant to their case, they can compel you, through a court action, to disclose it to them.

Regardless of the details surrounding your lawsuit, consult with your lawyer on the proper social media etiquette to follow as you are awaiting the conclusion of your case.

If you have been injured in a car accident or sustained an injury because of the faulty manufacturing of a product, the legal team at ACTS Law can help. We will work with you to ensure you receive a fair compensation package. Call 833-ACTS-LAW or contact us online today to schedule an appointment.

We are pleased to announce that our firm obtained a $7.0 million dollar settlement of a construction defect action. The parties used a modified SB800 pre-litigation procedure and multiple sessions of mediation to reach the settlement after close to two years of extensive inspections, testing and expert battles.
